ANGARA: NP'S LARGEST OIL SPILL

Massive oil spill threatens white Boracay beaches

By Philip C. Tubeza

A MASSIVE OIL SPILL CAUSED by a National Power Corp. barge last December is threatening the world-famous Boracay island resort, senators said yesterday.

Senators Edgardo Angara and Miriam Defensor-Santiago called on Napocor to speed up its cleanup of the oil spill, noting that it had been more than a month since bunker fuel spilled from a Napocor power barge on Dec. 18.

Angara said the spill occurred only 10 km from Boracay.

"UP scientists say that there is a possibility that it might have long-term adverse consequences on Boracay waters," Santiago said.

MASSIVE/A14

SCANDAL IN PARADISE: The talk of Panay island is what is considered the country's largest oil spill ever. A Napocor barge spilled reportedly 195,000 liters of bunker fuel last Dec. 18 off the shores of Semirara, only 10 km from the white beaches of Boracay.

PRIMITIVE WAY of cleaning up heavy crude oil is expected to last for three months manually done by 250 workers. So far, 17,000 sacks of contaminated materials have been collected. Napocor cites lack of equipment and personnel for the delay.

AFP grills 5 Faeldon supporters

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan

THE MILITARY'S INTERNAL SPY unit has mounted a crackdown against suspected supporters of Marine Capt. Nicanor Faeldon, eyeing soldiers involved in the failed July 27, 2003, Oakwood mutiny.

The Armed Forces of the Philippines Counter Intelligence Group (Afpicig) is interrogating five soldiers suspected of having helped the "Magdalo" leader enter military camps in a show of defiance during the 44 days he was on the loose.

Faeldon escaped last December after a hearing of the mutineers' case at a Makati city court. He was recaptured last Friday. Arrested with Faeldon was Capt. Candelaria Rivas, who was the spokesperson of the mutiny court-martial.

More soldiers are set to be brought in for "debriefing," said Col. Tristan Kison, a military spokesperson.

SC nullifies Meralco's 13.27¢/kWh hike in '04

By Armand N. Nocum

THE SUPREME COURT YESTERDAY declared null and void the 13.27-centavo per kilowatt-hour increase in generation charge that the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) granted Manila Electric Co. in 2004 because the company did not notify customers about the rate increase.

The high court also ordered that the ERC decision approving the increase in Meralco's rate from P3.1886 per kWh to P3.3213 per kWh be "immediately" set aside "for having been issued with grave abuse of discretion."

The decision was silent on whether Meralco customers would get a refund.

The ruling penned by Associate Justice Romeo Callejo was approved unanimously by all 14 justices, with Associate Justice Dante Tinga filing a separate concurring opinion on the case.

The tribunal ruled against the ERC and Meralco for their failure to publish Meralco's application for a rate increase in newspapers of general circulation.

"The lack of publication of respondent Meralco's amended application for the increase of its generation charge is ... fatal. By this omission, the consumers were deprived of the right to file their comments thereon," the high court said.

The Supreme Court said due process required "that the consumers be notified of any application, and be apprised of its contents, that would result in compounding their economic burden."

Fertilizer fund scam detailed in Senate

By TJ Burgonio

A BROKER FOR A VIRTUALLY unknown medical supplier yesterday exposed an alleged conspiracy between Department of Agriculture officials and local politicians to skim off the DA fund for liquid fertilizer.

Testifying at the Senate inquiry into the P728-million fertilizer fund scam, Jose Barredo Jr. said he met with congressmen, governors and mayors in their homes to persuade them to avail themselves of the DA fund by dangling an offer—a 30-percent commission.

The fertilizer fund was said to have been used to ensure the victory of President Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 2004 elections.

In a clear, candid testimony, Barredo rattled off the names of the officials who allegedly took hefty commissions and even dictated the amounts they should receive.

He said that at times, he personally delivered to some of them the commissions and the liquid fertilizer, some of which was diluted and overpriced.

The officials mentioned by Barredo included Representatives Monico Puentevella (Ba-

Soon on sale: 1-kg LPG with built-in burner

By Abigail L. Ho

FOLLOWING THE SUCCESS OF THE P30, P60 and P115 cell phone loads, households may soon be able to buy liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) for roughly the same amounts.

Riding on the popularity of sachet marketing, the Department of Energy (DOE) is urging liquefied petroleum gas suppliers to offer cooking gas in tanks with capacities as little as 1 kilogram.

The 1-kg LPG tanks will be similar to the 2.5- and 2.7-kg tanks that are already available in the market.

Two firms—DJ Safe Gas and Powertech Asia Pacific Inc.—have expressed their intention to offer 1-kg LPG tanks, which will likely be priced at a little more than P60, said Zenaida Monsada, DOE oil industry management bureau director.

Unlike the conventional 11-kg cylinders that are connected to gas ranges via a hose, the 1-kg cylinders

Davide backs poll automation — Abalos

By Jerome Aning

RETIRED SUPREME COURT Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr. met yesterday with top officials of the Commission on Elections in his new capacity as presidential adviser on electoral reform, and vowed to support the agency's efforts to automate the 2007 mid-term elections, Comelec Chair Benjamin Abalos Sr. said.

"He asked a lot of questions and he was very reactive," Abalos told reporters.

He said the meeting, which lasted about two-and-a-half hours, focused on the automation of next year's elections as mandated by Republic Act No. 8436.

Abalos said he and his colleagues looked forward to meeting with Davide more frequently so that he could act as Comelec's conduit with Malacañang and Congress.

Commissioners Resurreccion Borra, Florentino Tison Jr. and Romeo Brawner attended the meeting. Comelec has been reduced to four members following the expiration yesterday of the seven-year terms of Commissioners Mehrol Sadain and Rufino Javier.

Abalos said he reiterated to Davide Comelec's determination to pursue "all possible avenues" to secure authorization to use the automated counting machines it had purchased for the 2004 national and local elections.

The P1.3-billion deal was annulled by the Supreme Court two years ago due to bidding irregularities. Davide, who was then the chief justice, dissented from the majority decision, saying that there was no suggestion that graft and corruption attended the bidding process or that the contract price was excessive or unreasonable.

Abalos said Davide expressed his "full support" for the Comelec's commitment to automate the 2007 elections as mandated by law, but advised that alternative plans should also be drawn up.

One of the alternatives discussed at the meeting were the electronic voting machines demonstrated by visiting Indian election officials last week.

"The machines are very robustly designed and built, as well as easy to operate," Abalos said. "Their simplicity would probably shorten the time needed to prepare for their introduction into the Philippine electoral system."

No reason to quit, says PCGG chief

By Alcuin Papa

AN ADAMANT PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION on Good Government (PCGG) chair Camilo Sabio yesterday brushed aside calls for his resignation, after he had irked some senators by refusing to answer questions on a reported compromise on the coconut levy fund.

Sabio said he was simply following President Macapagal-Arroyo's marching orders with regard to the coco levy fund, which was to make sure the law was followed and that whatever deal was hammered out was not disadvantageous to the government.

"There is no reason to resign," said Sabio, when asked his reaction to the call made by Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, among other legislators.

Sabio had earlier said that if nothing happened with the coco levy case by the end of the year, he would resign from the PCGG.

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita, however, said the other day that Sabio was acting on his own when he began negotiations on a compromise between the coconut farmers and businessman Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco.

At stake is 20 percent of San Miguel Corp., the country's largest food and beverage conglomerate, which Cojuangco and the farmers are contesting.

When asked if he felt Malacañang had left him twisting in the wind with Ermita's statement, Sabio cryptically answered in a text message: "I am deeply grateful for the trust the President has (given) me."

When pressed if the Palace had instructed him to negotiate a compromise, Sabio sent another text: "I have repeatedly said I have not yet seen any compromise agreement."

Early this week, Sabio refused to answer questions posed by Senators Enrile and Joker Arroyo on whether or not Malacañang had approved negotiations on a compromise on the coco levy, and other questions related to some PCGG-sequestered companies.

Sabio invoked Executive Order No. 1 issued by President Corason Aquino in 1986 which created the PCGG. Section 4 of the EO says no PCGG official would be required to testify in any judicial, legislative or administrative proceeding concerning matters within its "official cognizance."

On Wednesday, Sabio said one reason for his refusal to answer the senators' questions was the earlier involvement of Senate President Franklin Drilon and Senators Enrile and Edgardo Angara in the coco levy cases.

Drilon said Sabio was using "squid tactics" when he brought up the senators' involvement in the coco levy fund issue as lawyers during the Marcos administration.

For his part, Arroyo said Sabio should resign his positions as chair or officer in charge of 29 government-sequestered corporations, 14 of them formerly controlled by Cojuangco, since these posts were in conflict with his job at PCGG.

"It is downright untenable and deplorable. As PCGG chair, he is pursuing these sequestered corporations for ill-gotten monies. Yet, he chairs the same sequestered corporations that he is going after," Arroyo said.

"How can he live with that arrangement? Of being the accuser as PCGG chair and defender as the sequestered corporation chair? By hanging on to them like nails, he erodes the credibility of the PCGG," he said. With Philip C. Tubesa

Misuari wants case remanded to DOJ for probe

By Tarra V. Quismundo

SAYING HIS CLIENTS HAD LONG BEEN DENIED DUE process, the lawyer of jailed Moro rebel leader Nur Misuari and seven of his alleged accomplices has asked a Makati court to suspend their trial and remand the rebellion case to the Department of Justice for preliminary investigation.

In a motion filed last Wednesday, lawyer Arthur Lim told the Makati Regional Trial Court Branch 138 that Misuari and his co-accused were "entering their fifth year of incarceration pending trial without benefit of a preliminary investigation... thereby denying them their basic right which, though not a constitutional right in nature, is nonetheless a component of due process in criminal justice."

Misuari and co-accused Ustadz Abuhanis Usman are currently at the St. Luke's Medical Center, where the court allowed them to undergo thorough medical examinations. They were released last Saturday from Fort St. Domingo in Sta. Rosa, Laguna for a 10-day medical furlough.

In his motion, Lim said that a reinvestigation ordered two years ago by then Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong never pushed through. He said a reinvestigation would allow his clients to submit a counter-affidavit to the rebellion charges.

On Dec. 3, 2003, Datumanong issued a resolution ordering a reinvestigation of the rebellion charge, which arose from an uprising in Jolo in 2001 in which about 100 people were killed.

"Regrettably, the resolution has not been implemented despite the fact that the same has not been stayed, appealed, nor nullified (by the Court), and remains valid up to this date," said Lim.

State Prosecutor Peter Ong opposed the motion and asked the court yesterday to deny the petition "for not only being dilatory, but for utter lack of merit."

"When the resolution of then Secretary Datumanong was issued, the case was already on trial. Thus, [Datumanong's] order for reinvestigation of this case after the accused have been arraigned, [with] the pre-trial terminated, was unprocedural," said Ong.

Erap eye surgery a 'success'

By Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

DOCTORS HAVE PRONOUNCED DEPOSED President Estrada's eye surgery "successful" but said he has to remain in hospital for three more days so they can "monitor his recovery".

"We are hoping and praying that he will be allowed to stay at the hospital for a few more days. We hope the Sandiganbayan will be more compassionate and more humane," said San Juan Mayor JV Ejercito, one of Estrada's sons.

The Sandiganbayan anti-graft court allowed Estrada, who is under "rest house arrest" on plunder charges, to check into the San Juan Medical Center for treatment last Tuesday after he complained of blurred vision and headaches.

His doctors said he was suffering from an eye infection caused by an insect bite. But he also needed surgery to remove excess eyelid skin that was affecting his vision, they said.

His family decided to push through with the surgery the other night.

"We decided on our own to go on with the operation with or without a court order. President Estrada's health is at stake here. We hope the Sandiganbayan will understand," Ejercito said.

The surgery lasted more than two hours, from 10 p.m. of Wednesday to 12:15 a.m. yesterday.

Estrada was conscious during the surgery and was only just slightly sedated, said his personal physician, Dr. Lorenzo Hocson.

"The operation was very successful. He is now recovering well," Hocson said.

He said Estrada was already "in high spirits" yesterday and was even planning to "offer a thanksgiving Mass."

Aside from treating the infection in his right eye, the doctors also removed the excess skin in both eyelids.

They also found cysts in the lower lid of his left eye but they chose not to remove them to avoid risking more infection.

employees' Retirement System) in its 2006 Permissible Markets List, the DFA said, quoting a report from the Philippine Embassy in Washington. Its latest score of 2.13—from last year's 2.00—given by CalPERS' consulting firm Wilshire Associates, improved the country's standing compared with other emerging markets, particularly Malaysia, China, Russia and India, according to Ambassador Albert del Rosario.

Investments in SMC, PLDT

Last year, CalPERS had $172 billion in assets, of which an estimated $85 million was invested in Philippine companies like San Miguel Corp. and Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co.

It had approximately $3.9 billion invested in emerging markets as of February 2005. The pension fund provides retirement and health benefits to 1.4 million state and local public employees and their families in California.

Del Rosario attributed the country's "remarkable performance" to the reduction in its fiscal deficit, the passage and implementation of the expanded value-added tax law, and "advances in the country's battle against corruption."

Brownie points & GMA

The diplomat said CalPERS' decision "reflects strong confidence in the Philippines and in the reform drive of the government."

But he was also quick to translate all these into political brownie points for the embattled Arroyo administration.

"(This) is a clear indication that the international business community recognizes the President's economic reform efforts and the achievements made toward this end," Del Rosario said in the DFA statement.

The economy continues to make significant strides under Ms. Arroyo's leadership "despite recent political controversies."

"The peso was the best performing currency in 2005 [in Asia]. Foreign investment in the Philippines has remained robust. Our equities market was the best performer in Southeast Asia. Our inflation is still single digit despite soaring oil prices," the ambassador noted.

RP rolling out red carpet for Indian president

2020. Not an Asian tiger but a steady elephant, India has emerged as one of the world's top 10 economies, which is touted to become the third largest in 30 years, the first one being China.

Filipinos will have to shake off from their minds the stereotype they have of India—land of the "Bombays," the local catchall term for Indians. Filipinos knew them as security guards and ambulant vendors of mosquito nets during pre-war Manila. More recently, Indians have become known as usurious moneylenders who have positioned themselves in all corners of the archipelago.

But India should also cast aside its Cold War hang-up about the Philippines as a permanent US colony, excluded from India's "civilization neighbors" in Southeast Asia. India used to dismiss Asean as a "Coca-Cola Club" but now anxiously wants to be part of the regional grouping.

India is becoming a global knowledge hub with a central place in the transnational movement of knowledge and services. It is also a magnet for foreign investors in the field of IT and manufacturing as well as biotechnology and pharmaceuticals. The vitality of its 1.2 billion people—half of which is below 35—lies in the fact that 60 percent of them are literate, many of them English-speaking.

Is the Philippines ready to reengage this powerhouse?

Delicious food

Recently, former President Fidel V. Ramos headed a trade delegation to Mumbai, Kolkata and New Delhi. Members of the delegation were interested in information technology, educational exchange, pharmaceuticals, films, jewelry and herbal medicines. They were enthusiastic about the wide range of contacts they made and the easy communication with Indians, who speak English. Trade and investment between the Philippines and India, however, remain below potential.

A member of the Ramos delegation said he found Indian food just too spicy even at five-star hotels. He ended up eating at McDonalds. But Indian food can be delicious and does not always have to be hot; Larry Cruz, Filipino owner of Bollywood Restaurant in Makati, has proven this.

In Mumbai, the focal point of the Ramos visit was the Birla group which made the first major Indian investment in the Philippines in 1975. The late Aditya Birla, a visionary industrialist, served as honorary consul of the Philippines in Mumbai and his widow, Rajashree, has taken over the position.

Language bond

The Birlas have generously helped the Philippines in consular matters over the years, a fact acknowledged by the Philippine government which took the unprecedented step of awarding posthumously the Sikatuna Award, normally given to ambassadors, to the late A. Birla.

The English language is another bond that Filipinos share with Indians. A great number of modern Indians and Filipinos are able to communicate in a way other Asians can't. It is the two million nonresident Indians (NRIs) in the United States who helped build Silicon Valley and made America's IT industry reach new heights. The NRIs play a role in forging closer relations between India and the United States.

Filipinos and Indians are discovering each other in the field of services retailing to information technology. Some Indian companies have already set up call centers in the Philippines. Another area of collaboration is in the "nonvoice" business processing outsourcing, which deals with medical, legal, financial, banking and accounting services.

Significantly, Filipino animators have found work in Bangalore. But Filipinos must work hard at keeping educational norms high, especially in the engineering and scientific fields.

Filipinos' proficiency in English must be world-class. Creativeness and meritocracy should rule; corruption and political patronage must be rooted out if Filipinos are to survive and go beyond becoming domestic helpers in the IT sector for we must also create software.

Asia's 2 oldest democracies

But Philippine relations with India are not based solely on commercial considerations, however important these are. The Philippines and India are the two oldest post-colonial democracies in Asia. However imperfect their systems might be, the fact that the Philippines and India have democratic institutions in place is an important bond in a region where freedom, justice and human dignity are sacrificed for economic gains.

One of the most encouraging features of people-to-people contact between our two countries is the rich dialogue and constant exchange between Indian and Filipino NGOs in diverse areas such as socioeconomic issues, women's rights and spiritual values.

Nuclear power

If a country develops economic power, its military might also grows. India is a military and nuclear power. When the military issue is raised with Indian friends, they readily answer that India is peace-loving and, like in ancient times, will not seek to subjugate its neighbors.

However, as Amartya Sen and Stephen Cohen have said in their writings, the nuclear debate is a real one in India. There are those who see India's nuclear capability as a needed deterrent to threats; others see it as a futile exercise in the search for security.

Nuclear tensions on the Indian subcontinent are far away from where we are in the Pacific. Even so, Filipinos whose history has been one of invasion, conquest and occupation by stronger military powers, hope that India will live in peace with its neighbors and share prosperity equitably.

Filipinos and Indians must reengage each other in the 21st century under new and fresh conditions.

Sir 47:2-11
Mark 6:14-29

King Herod also heard about Jesus because his name had become well-known. Some people said, "John the Baptist has been raised from the dead and that is why miraculous powers are at work in him." Others thought, "He is Elijah," and others, "He is a prophet like the prophets of times past." When Herod was told of this, he thought: "I had John beheaded, yet he has risen from the dead!"

For this is what had happened. Herod had ordered John to be arrested and had him bound and put in prison because of Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip. Herod had married her and John had told him, "It is not right for you to live with your brother's wife." So Herodias held a grudge against John and wanted to kill him, but she could not because Herod respected John. He knew John to be an upright and holy man and kept him safe. And he liked listening to him, although he became very disturbed whenever he heard him.

Herodias had her chance on Herod's birthday, when he gave a dinner for all the senior government officials, military chiefs and the leaders of Galilee. On that occasion the daughter of Herodias came in and danced; and she delighted Herod and his guests. The king said to the girl, "Ask me for anything you want and I will give it to you." And he went so far as to say with many oaths, "I will give you anything you ask, even half my kingdom." She went out to consult her mother, "What shall I ask for?" The mother replied, "The head of John the Baptist." The girl hurried to the king and made her request: "I want you to give me the head of John the Baptist, here and now, on a dish."

The king was very displeased, but he would not refuse in front of his guests because of his oaths. So he sent one of the bodyguards with orders to bring John's head. He went and beheaded John in prison; then he brought the head on a dish and gave it to the girl. And the girl gave it to her mother. When John's disciples heard of this, they came and took his body and buried it.

Commentary

The praises of David are sung, telling both of his sins forgiven and his praises of God. And in Mark we hear the story of John the Baptist imprisoned for telling the truth to Herod and how Philip's wife, Herodias, plots to kill him because he accused them of murder and unfaithfulness. And she waits for her chance and has John beheaded at a dinner party. Now Jesus arises among the people and there are echoes of the prophets of old like Elijah and John the Baptist, with the people wondering who Jesus might actually be.

Who are the prophets among us? Do we listen and look, and seek the Word of the Lord in those who speak out against injustice?

Filipino seamen losing out to automation, competition

GREATER AUTOMATION ABOARD SHIPS and competition from Asian neighbors are cutting into demand for the Filipinos who make up 20 percent of the sailors in the global shipping industry, the International Labor Organization said yesterday.

The current shipbuilding boom has created strong demand for officers worldwide, the ILO said, but the trend toward automated vessels with smaller crews has reduced the need for lower-skilled seafarers, known as ratings.

"As today's ships become more specialized and automated, the required skills mix has changed," the ILO said in a statement. "Demand for skilled deck officers and engineers continues to rise, while slimmer crews means the need for lesser skilled ratings is dropping."

A December report by the Baltic and International Maritime Council estimated a worldwide shortage of 10,000 qualified officers and a surplus of 135,000 ratings, the ILO said.

Aside from shrinking overall demand, less-skilled Filipino sailors are facing competition from Asian neighbors like China, India, Myanmar and Vietnam, just as Filipinos squeezed out their European and American counterparts in the past, the ILO said.

The labor body said the benchmark monthly wage for Filipino ratings is $1,400, while sailors from other Asian countries are accepting jobs for as low as $500 to $700.

Some ship owners also are increasingly imposing age restrictions—sometimes as low as 40 years, it said.

But the ILO quoted shipping industry and labor executives as saying many ship owners still prefer Filipino crewmen because they speak English, are Western-oriented and "flexible and have a caring attitude."

The labor body said it is now crafting a new Maritime Labor Convention to reflect the needs of a globalized shipping industry. If adopted, it will consolidate and update more than 65 international labor standards. AP

Appeals court asked to clear backlog of cases

By Armand N. Nocum

THE NEW PRESIDING JUSTICE OF THE Court of Appeals, Ruben T. Reyes, has asked the CA justices to clear the backlog of cases in their sala, saying that no real justice is attained when cases are delayed.

Reyes said he wanted to make the CA "righteous and reasonable in its decisions and resolutions, and responsible and responsive to the challenge of judicial service."

"First and foremost, we will address very earnestly the matter of eliminating the backlog in cases," Reyes said in an interview.

He said the appellate court, which receives an average of 8,049 cases a year, would be giving priority to cases that are more than a year old from the date of submission.

As of Jan. 2, he said there were only 54 cases dating back to 1999 and beyond.

Reyes said he would issue an order today that the 54 cases be decided in 60 days and after that, within the next 10 months, from March to December.

"Our target is to decide all appealed cases from 2000 to 2004," he said.

Since he himself has a "zero backlog" in his sala, Reyes said he would volunteer to work on some of the older cases.

The CA presiding justice said there were only a total of 10,000 pending cases before the appellate court, which was founded 70 years ago. He said the court has resolved 14,000 of the 13,000 new cases filed last year.

"So by December, we can easily dispatch the 10,000 [pending] cases this year so that the 10,000 to 12,000 cases that we will receive this year will all be current cases next year, no more backlog," he said.

The court considers as backlog cases those that have remained undecided for more than one year from the date of submission.

Reyes, who was appointed in December, said CA justices have managed to reduce to an average of two years the time needed for cases to be resolved—a marked improvement from the 15 to 20 years that it used to take the CA to decide cases.

However, he foresees a drastic increase in the number of cases to be handled by the court now that the Supreme Court has thrown to the CA all appealed administrative cases filed before the Office of the Ombudsman.

"The Supreme Court declared that all these appeals or petitions for review from the [Ombudsman] should be brought to the CA first and from there to the high court," he said.

colod City), Oscar Garin (Iloilo), Edgar Espinosa (Guimaras) and Reynina "Neneng" Nicolas (Bulacan); Governors Vicente Bermejo (Capiz) and Florencio Miraflores (Aklan), and Kalibo Mayor Reynar Rebaldo.

Some of the officials issued denials. (See story at right.)

Barredo said that between January and April 2004, he worked with one Marites "Tess" Aytona, believed to be one of the owners of medical supplier Feshan Philippines Inc. and an "agent" of then Agriculture Undersecretary Jocelyn "Jocjoc" Bolante.

He said it was Aytona who took care of getting the required papers signed, and having the necessary funds as well as the commissions released.

Identifying himself as a broker of Feshan, Barredo said Aytona had claimed that the DA fund was being managed by Bolante, the alleged chief architect of the fertilizer fund program.

The Senate tried to serve a subpoena on Aytona at the Feshan office at 16 Sgt. Esquerro Ave., South Triangle, Quezon City, but found the place abandoned.

Overpricing

At the same hearing, Commission on Audit officials said the suppliers and nongovernment organizations that received a huge portion of the P728-million fund from the DA for eventual distribution to farmers' groups "overpriced" the cost of the fertilizer by millions of pesos.

Sorsogon Board Member Rebecca Aquino testified that the provincial government received P5 million from the DA and used it to purchase over 2,000 liters of Bio Nature Liquid Fertilizer.

BOLANTE: Have you seen this man?

She said the fertilizer—sold by local suppliers at between P180 and P350 per liter—was bought at the padded cost of P1,500 per liter from Feshan itself, and turned out to be inappropriate for rice and corn.

After the hearing, Sen. Ramon Magsaysay Jr. told reporters: "In effect, we have further strengthened the truth that the [DA] down to the RFU level had made use of the fund to commit such large-scale overpricing and under-delivery.

"If this is not reversed, we will continue to bleed, and our farmers will continue to be impoverished."

Magsaysay, chair of the investigating committee on agriculture and food, said it was up to the COA to pick up from where the committee had left off: "The COA itself can file cases."

But the senator said he was not keen on inviting the lawmakers mentioned by Barredo. He said the House of Representatives' committee on ethics should look into the broker's claims.

'SOP'

In his testimony, the bespectacled Barredo said he worked with Aytona on the sale of medicines to local government units from 1997 to 2003.

He said that in January 2004, Aytona invited him to work with her in the sale of liquid fertilizer to local officials, with the funds coming from the DA and the fertilizer to be purchased from Feshan.

Barredo named a Julie Gregorio as the president of Feshan, which, he said, had connections to Bolante and was authorized by the latter to supply fertilizer to local government units.

"She (Aytona) told me that funds from the DA would be given to the LGUs to buy the fertilizer. According to Tess, the fund is being managed by DA Usec Bolante," Barredo said, reading from a sworn affidavit.

Initially, Barredo said, he and Aytona met with Mayors Castillo and Pagdanganan of the Bulacan towns of Pulilan and Calumpit, respectively, and Bulacan Representative Nicolas to inform them they had funds ranging from P3 million to P6 million.

He said Nicolas "declined to accept the fertilizer, and decided to accept cash only."

"I learned that if the fund, for instance, was P3 million, the SOP (standard operating procedure or commission) would be P900,000 (30 percent of P3 million), and the rest would be used to buy fertilizer," he said.

For his work, Barredo said Aytona promised him P10,000 a month, plus 3-5 percent of the commission.

Demands

After his stint in Central Luzon, Barredo, being an Ilonggo, was instructed by Aytona to concentrate on Region 6.

There, he said, he made the same offer to officials who included Congressmen Puentevela, Garin and Espinosa, Governors Bermejo and Miraflores and Mayor Rebaldo.

He said Puentevela, who was allotted P5 million, accepted the offer, but insisted that only 25 percent be used to buy fertilizer and the rest be converted to cash.

"Tess Aytona was with me at that time," Barredo said.

Garin, who was allocated P5 million, also received a commission equivalent to 30 percent of the fund, Barredo said. He said Espinosa got a P3-million fund and a 30-percent "SOP."

Barredo said that when he and Aytona met with Bermejo at the Roxas capitol, the governor asked about the amount of the commission and was told that he would get 20 percent.

"The governor retorted that a supplier had given a 40-percent offer, and instructed Tess to call Usec Bolante. I saw and heard Governor Bermejo and Usec Bolante talk on the 'Black propaganda,' says governor

"BLACK PROPAGANDA" WAS HOW Capiz Gov. Vicente Bermejo described the testimony of his fellow Capiceno Jose Barredo Jr. that he had received a 40-percent commission for the delivery of liquid fertilizer to his province.

Bermejo said he was ready to face the Senate if given a chance in order to clear his name. "We have supporting documents to prove that [the fertilizer] was distributed to farmers in Capiz, and [a] corresponding [Commission on Audit] report that [the project] was properly implemented," Bermejo said in a statement e-mailed to the Inquirer yesterday.

The governor also belied allegations that the project was used for the 2004 election campaign, saying it was implemented in July 2004, or two months after the polls.

Former Aklan governor and now Rep. Florencio Miraflores also denied Barredo's allegation that he had received a P1.5-million commission.

"I'm really surprised that my name has been dragged into that controversy," he said in a phone interview.

Miraflores said he neither knew nor had heard of Barredo.

He said that while Aklan was a recipient of a fertilizer fund of P5 million, the project was implemented only in September 2004, when he was already a congressman.

In a separate phone interview, Kalibo Mayor Reynar Rebaldo also denied knowing Barredo.

"That is laughable. I do not recall meeting him," Rebaldo said.

Former Iloilo Rep. Oscar Garin likewise denied knowing Barredo or having met with him.

Garin said audit reports and a check with the recipients and suppliers would disprove Barredo's claims. Reports from Connie E. Fernandez and Nestor R. Burgos Jr., PDI Visayas Bureau phone," Barredo said, adding that he eventually delivered the first tranche of the commission to the governor.

The one who rejected offer

Per Barredo's testimony:

• He visited Puentevela at the latter's home in Bacolod in April 2004 to present the memorandum of agreement, but the lawmaker signed it only a few days later.

• Miraflores did not sign the MOA until he received the P1.5-million commission a day before the May 2004 elections.

• Rebaldo did not agree to the initial offer of P600,000 in commissions and demanded more. The additional money was delivered.

• Iloilo Rep. Arthur Defensor did not accept his allocation from the DA but requested that this be distributed to Mayors Alex Centena of Calinog, Mayor Mario Malones of Masin and Mayor Ramirez of Lambunao.

"Before the elections, we also met with Congressman Lacson, Congressman Maranon and Governor Maranon, but the release of their allocations did not push through after they switched sides and supported FPJ (Fernando Poe Jr., standard-bearer of the opposition)," Barredo said.

Health Survey (NDHS) of 2003, prefers pills over other methods of contraception.

It is said to prevent pregnancy by keeping eggs from being released from the ovary, while thickening the cervical mucus to keep sperm out of the uterus.

The pill's manufacturer, Organon, has cut its retail price to P75 per strip from the original P252.50. The drastic reduction in price is expected to benefit the disadvantaged classes.

"By offering the product at a much lower price, Organon will help more women have more access to safe and reliable contraception," Francesca Ballmer, the company's Philippine general manager, said yesterday at a press conference.

Organon has shared head offices in the United States (New Jersey) and the Netherlands (Oss).

The move is expected to open the local market to companies producing popular contraceptives such as condoms and pills.

But despite the promises of Desogestrel, the manufacturer is bracing itself for strong opposition from the Catholic Church, which is firmly against artificial family planning methods.

"We fully respect the stand of the Catholic Church," Ballmer said. "Our opinion is that all Filipinos should have a fully informed choice and make their own decisions."

Promising market

Based on the Filipino pregnancy behaviors indicated in the NDHS, there is a promising market for producers of foreign contraceptives.

The survey says women aged between 25 and 49 have their first baby at the median age of 23.2, which is quite near the median age for their first sexual intercourse—22.8 in urban areas and 20.8 among the poor.

In a presentation, Organon medical adviser Dr. Sylvia Santos translated the supposed Philippine birth rate of 2.36 percent to four million Filipinos being born every year (Pro-life advocates insist the birth rate is only 1.9 percent.)

Santos said pills were generally efficient in preventing pregnancy, with a failure rate of only 0.1 percent. The failure rate of condoms is 3 percent, and the withdrawal method 4 percent.

Margin of safety

Desogestrel was first introduced in 1981. Currently, it has four million users in more than 100 countries, Organon said.

It is taken on a 28-day regimen and has a margin of safety of 12 hours. That means it is still safe for the user to have sex within that period when she forgets to take the pill, according to Santos.

The pill is also skin-friendly, Santos said, citing a 1998 study claiming that "over 80 percent of pre-existing acne had disappeared after six cycles of treatment."

She said the same study showed a low incidence of side effects, such as nausea and headaches, among users.

Another study conducted in 1990 showed that the pill decreases the incidence of menstrual pain or dysmenorrhea, she added.

Santos disputed the allegation that pills were abortifacients, meaning they induced abortion.

Misconception

"It's a misconception and [a product of] misinformation," she said. "For abortion to occur, there must first be pregnancy. But as you can see, most of the pills today prevent ovulation. How can a pill be an abortifacient if there's no pregnancy?"

Santos also claimed that pills could reduce the incidence of ovarian and uterine cancer.

NAIA3 COMPENSATION

Palace: No settlement on Piatco

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

MALACANANG IS NOT INTERESTED in a settlement with Fraport AG because government lawyers are confident they could win the case filed by the German airport operator for compensation of its investment in Ninoy Aquino International Airport Terminal 3.

Trade Secretary Peter Favila, the government's point man for Naia 3, said Fraport had to show proof of its investment in the terminal to the World Bank's International Center for the Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID) in Washington D.C.

"The burden of proof is on them (Fraport). They claim they spent this much for Naia 3 so they should back this up with official records. I believe ICSID will want proof of their spending before judging on their just compensation," Favila said.

Fraport went to the World Bank to seek arbitration after the government expropriated the terminal whose contract was deemed to be riddled with irregularities by the Supreme Court.

Fraport claimed it spent more than $425 million to put up Naia 3 under a build-operate-and-transfer contract with Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (Piatco).

The deal was voided by the Supreme Court in 2003 and it ordered the government to compensate Piatco for its investment.

"We're going to pursue the case. We are confident that we will win. We're not interested in a compromise deal," Favila said yesterday following a briefing in Malacanan.

Last year, Fraport struck a deal with Manila Hotel to sell its stake in Naia 3 for $200 million. The deal collapsed the other day.

"Substantial roadblocks in reaching an agreement could not be removed," Fraport said in a statement on Wednesday.

Fraport said it would continue to pursue compensation for its holding in the terminal through the World Bank after the Philippine government had rejected Fraport's demand for $425 million in compensation.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday upheld its earlier order for the government to pay an initial P3 billion ($57.6 million) to the Fraport-led consortium that built the terminal.

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said ICSID should come out with its decision on the case by March or April.

Favila said the government, through the Manila International Airport Authority (Miaa), is set to hire an independent assessor to appraise Naia 3.

Fraport said Wednesday it was confident it had a strong case for compensation at the World Bank.

Airport passes to be limited

By Nikko Dizon

AIMING TO FURTHER "sanitize" and decongest the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (Naia) terminals, the Manila International Airport Authority (Miaa) has begun limiting the access area allowed for visitors' passes.

Robert Uy, head executive assistant of Miaa general manager Alfonso Cusi, said the airport authority recognizes the Filipino trait of giving a warm welcome or send off but "there are security and operational concerns that have to be taken into consideration."

In a memo dated Jan. 31, Cusi cited the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) standards as a basis for implementing the stricter rules.

Bush 'State' speech greeted by doubts

WASHINGTON—PRESIDENT George W. Bush's new appeal for greater democracy in the Middle East and efforts to make drastic cuts in oil imports from the region was greeted Wednesday with doubts and some opposition.

The president's call for a 75 percent cut in Middle East oil imports in the next 20 years was the centerpiece of his annual State of the Union speech on Tuesday night.

Seeking to regain public support in an election year, he also pressed key allies in the Middle East to promote democracy and made new criticism of the Iranian regime.

Bush defiantly declared that the United States was the indispensable actor on the global stage, warning that "the only alternative to American leadership is a dramatically more dangerous and anxious world."

The president said America has

BUSH a day after delivering his fifth State of the Union address. AFP

"a serious problem" because it is "addicted to oil, which is often imported from unstable parts of the world," like the Middle East.

He called for new research into ethanol, coal-fired plants, solar and wind technologies and nuclear energy so that 75 percent of oil imports from the Middle East can be replaced by 2025.

While the administration said plans for increased subsidies would boost research, experts and the media expressed doubts.

"If those technologies have economic merit, no subsidy is necessary. If they don't, then no subsidy will provide it," said Jerry Taylor, a senior fellow at the conservative Cato Institute in Washington.

The Washington Post said the goal is spectacular but the "deadline is far off, and it's not clear what he intends in practice."

The US leader also devoted much of his speech to Middle East politics saying the United States cannot hastily withdraw from Iraq, that Egypt and Saudi Arabia must step up democracy efforts and making a direct appeal to the Iranian people.

By Tom Doggett

WASHINGTON—AMERICANS may drive cars in two decades that operate on pollution-free hydrogen or fuel made from grass and wood chips, but it will not be enough to reduce significantly US oil imports from the Middle East.

President George W. Bush told Congress on Tuesday that America was addicted to oil and needed to slash its Middle East crude purchases by 75 percent by 2025 by building vehicles that run on alternative fuels.

The big three US automakers are each working on a hydrogen fuel cell prototype, but so far prices remain too high for commercial sale.

"But at a price range of $700,000 to $1 million, a lot of work needs to be done to get them to a price-point that's feasible," said Eron Shostek, a spokesperson for the Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers.

Much work also needs to be done in ensuring the vehicles meet safety and emission standards, and in developing an infrastructure of hydrogen fueling stations, Shostek said.

Producers of ethanol, a fuel that can be made from corn, sugar, or waste products like wood chips and switch grass, are preparing to increase output.

"We are pleased that President Bush recognizes the need to move the country toward an energy future that is less reliant on unreliable and increasingly costly foreign sources of oil," said Bob Dinneen, president of the Renewable Fuels Association trade group.

However, ethanol supplies are not seen reaching the volumes needed to replace crude oil shipments from the Middle East and the hydrogen-powered cars are not supposed to be in showrooms at affordable prices until as late as 2020.

And environmental groups say they like Bush's goal to slash oil imports, but do not think it can be reached unless the government orders a significant boost in fuel efficiency standards for car and trucks.

The federal Energy Information Administration said in its long-term forecast released in December that US crude oil imports will average 12.3 million barrels a day in 2025, with shipments from the Middle East, about a quarter of that.

That means to reach to the president's goal, about 2.3 million barrels of daily Mideast imports will have to be replaced through the use of new fuels and new cars.

"It's a significant amount of oil. If he were successful it would be very significant. But I don't think it will come to pass," said Sarah Emerson, director at Energy Security Analysis Inc., in Boston.

US ethanol supplies will be just 783,000 barrels a day in two decades—a drop in the bucket compared to the more than 26.1 million barrels per day of crude and petroleum products the country will consume, according to the EIA, which is the Energy Department's analytical arm said.

Israel halts tax payments to Palestinians

JERUSALEM—ISRAELI ON Wednesday halted tax payments to the cash-strapped Palestinian Authority over Hamas' election victory, prompting the Palestinians to turn to Saudi Arabia and Qatar for extra cash to cushion the economic shock.

Customs revenue collected by Israel on behalf of the authority is the main source of funding for the Palestinian budget. The money, transferred on the first of each month, is used to pay an estimated 140,000 Palestinian government workers.

But the United States later on Wednesday pressed Israel to keep up the payments at least until Hamas was in the government.

"We're talking to them about it. But we have made it very clear ... that individual governments, organizations, look for ways that they could support this interim government," state department spokesperson Sean McCormack told reporters.

Palestinian Economy Minister Mazen Sonnoqrot decried what he called Israel's "illegal decision," saying it amounted to "collective punishment" and estimated that as many as 1 million Palestinians would be affected. "This may cause chaos," he said.

Israel's calls to shun a Hamas-led Palestinian Authority received fresh support from US President George W. Bush, who, along with the European Union, has threatened to cut off funding if the group does not renounce violence and recognize Israel.

"In order for the United States to support a Palestinian government run by Hamas, Hamas must change its party platform and change its way of thinking and get rid of this armed group, as well as change its attitude toward Israel," Bush told Reuters in an interview.

Hamas has urged foreign donors to maintain aid but says it could still find other sources of funding in the Arab world. It sent a delegation of Gaza-based officials and exiled leaders on a tour of Arab countries to urge them to keep the money flowing.

"The tour will aim to clarify Hamas' position based on its election agenda and to press Arab countries to continue with financial aid to the Palestinian people," said Sami Abu Zuhri, a Hamas spokesperson in Gaza.

A senior Palestinian official said the Palestinian Authority was in negotiations with Saudi Arabia and Qatar for an emergency increase in aid so the authority can pay its employees.

Saddam boycotts trial

BAGHDAD—FORMER Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein and other high-profile defendants refused to attend Wednesday's session of their trial, as the embattled tribunal finally completed the first phase of testimony.

Neither Saddam, his defense team, nor any of the three other well-known defendants were at the hearing after they all quit the stormy first session of the trial under new judge Rauf Rasheed Abdel Rahman's control on Sunday.

Wednesday's session saw the trial complete the complainants' phase, with testimony directed against the defendants, and move on to the hearing of witnesses.

In the course of the day's testimony, two complainants and three witnesses related the chilling torture tactics which they had endured or witnessed at the hands of the old regime.

The eight defendants are on trial over the massacre of 148 Shiites from the village of Dujiil after an assassination attempt on Saddam in 1982 and face the death penalty if convicted.

One of the more minor defendants, a former local Baath party official, also refused to attend, leaving just three of the original defendants in an accused box marked by five empty black seats. AFP

China won't show 'Geisha'

HONG KONG—THE CHINESE government has canceled the release of "Memoirs of a Geisha"—an unexplained decision amid speculation that officials are worried the sight of Chinese actresses playing Japanese geishas would stir a backlash.

"Memoirs," based on the best-selling novel by Arthur Golden, features "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" star Zhang Ziyi, former Bond girl Michelle Yeoh and Gong Li from "Raise the Red Lantern" as geishas—entertainers skilled in dance, song and conversation.

The casting choices may have raised fears in the Chinese government of provoking strong anti-Japanese sentiment. Sino-Japanese relations have been strained in recent years over territorial disputes and a lingering sense among many Chinese that Japan hasn't sufficiently apologized for its World War II-era military atrocities.

China says up to 300,000 people were killed in Nanjing during a 1937 rampage of murder, rape and looting by Japanese troops.

Many Chinese could be offended by the symbolism of ethnic Chinese actresses serving Japanese, albeit in a movie. Adding the already sensitive nature of the film, Zhang's character in the film serves a businessman who was a Japanese soldier in China's then-Japanese-occupied territory of Manchuria.

Among recent anti-Japanese backlash, demonstrators vandalized Japanese-related shops and smashed windows at Japanese diplomatic offices in Shanghai and Beijing in April to protest alleged whitewashing of atrocities in Japanese textbooks.

Bush: No gas price breaks

NASHVILLE, Tennessee—President George W. Bush says the huge profits of Exxon Mobil Corp. are simply the result of the marketplace, and consumers socked with soaring energy costs should not expect price breaks. Early this week, Exxon reported record profits of $10.71 billion for the fourth quarter and $36.13 billion for the year, the largest of any US company. While some politicians objected furiously, Bush had a different reaction. "There is a marketplace in American society," he said. "There's also a responsibility for energy companies to continue to invest and improve the ways that the American people can get energy," he said. "I would very much hope that Exxon would participate in the development of a pipeline out of Alaska, for example, in order to make sure there's more natural gas available for families and small business owners so the economy will grow."

Australia resisted Timor freedom

SYDNEY—A report to the United Nations found that Australia actively lobbied to delay East Timor's independence vote in 1999 and prevent its separation from Indonesia, the national broadcaster said Thursday. The Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC) said it had obtained a copy of the report by East Timor's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which accused Australia of violating its duties under international law. The commission produced the 2,500-page report after spending three years collecting evidence about Indonesia's 25-year occupation of East Timor. It said Foreign Minister Alexander Downer indicated Canberra preferred for East Timor to remain legally part of Indonesia and actively lobbied the government in Jakarta to delay the independence vote, ABC said.

KHOMEINI ADMIRER—Iran President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad cries during a visit to the tomb of Iran's late founder of the Islamic Republic, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in Tehran Jan. 31.

Reporting Iran to UN Council a certainty

VIENNA, AUSTRIA—AFTER MONTHS OF fruitless negotiations, European nations have set the stage for reporting Iran to the powerful UN Security Council by the end of the week because of concerns the Islamic country's nuclear program is not "exclusively for peaceful purposes."

Iran remained defiant, warning Wednesday that such action will provoke it into doing exactly what the world wants it to renounce—starting full-scale uranium enrichment, a possible pathway to nuclear weapons.

Positions appeared to be hardening on the eve of an International Atomic Energy Agency meeting after European nations formally submitted a US-backed motion for the IAEA's 35-nation board to refer Iran to the Security Council. The two-day board meeting was to start Thursday.

"Nuclear energy is our right, and we will resist until this right is fully realized," President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad told a crowd of thousands in the southern Iran city of Bushehr, site of a Russian-built power plant. "Our nation can't give in to the coercion of some bully countries who imagine they are the whole world."

Speaking a day after US President George W. Bush declared in his State of the Union address that "the nations of the world must not permit the Iranian regime to gain nuclear weapons," Ahmadinejad derided the United States as a "hollow superpower" and vowed to pursue the nuclear program.

The IAEA board was expected to approve the motion easily because Russia and China—which both have veto power on the Security Council—now support reporting Iran following months of opposition.

"Iran will find itself before the Security Council," state department spokesperson Sean McCormack said in Washington. "Iran is working to develop a nuclear weapon."

The developments were a boost to the United States, the main proponent of referral. Washington has waited years for international suspicions of Iran's nuclear ambitions to translate into support among board nations.

Iran's decision Jan. 10 to restart small-scale uranium enrichment—and Ahmadinejad's calls for Israel to be wiped off the map—apparently rattled Beijing and Moscow. Iran became more insistent on its right to pursue a nuclear program and less cooperative in talks with European negotiators after the election of the hard-line Ahmadinejad last June.

The call for referral was contained in a confidential resolution obtained by The Associated Press. It "requests the director general to report to the Security Council" on steps Iran needs to take to dispel international suspicion it could be seeking to make nuclear arms.

If the board approves referral as expected, it will launch a protracted process that could end in Security Council sanctions for Tehran.

Still, any such moves are weeks or months away. Moscow and Beijing support referral only on condition that the council take no action until at least March, when the board next meets to review the status of an IAEA probe into Iran's nuclear program and recommends further action.

Ali Larijani, Tehran's top nuclear negotiator, warned that Iran would start large-scale uranium enrichment at its Natanz plant and stop intrusive UN inspections of its facilities if reported to the Security Council.

"Natanz is ready for work. We only need to notify the IAEA that we are resuming (large-scale) enrichment. When we do that is our call. If they (report Iran to the Security Council), we will do it quickly," Larijani said.

Iran insists its nuclear program is civilian only and has no other purpose than to generate power. Enrichment can produce either fuel for a nuclear reactor or the material needed to build a warhead.

Iran's threat to resume large-scale enrichment immediately, however, appeared overblown.

WHILE PEOPLE SEEM RESIGNED TO HIGHER prices because of a higher value-added tax, that doesn't mean they like it. Among other things, the first fallout from the consequences of a higher VAT will be felt as people prepare to spend less for Valentine's Day. As the saying already gaining currency goes, "Love is cheap because everything's mahal."

EDITORIAL President Macapagal-Arroyo has unleashed a new round of campaigning, trying to give the citizenry billions of reasons to start liking her again: P11.5 billion in January alone for "pump-priming" the economy through spending on what looks like an extremely fatty, pork-rich shopping list: P5 billion for the Philippine Defense Reform, P500 million for farm-to-market roads, P500 million for flood mitigation, P1 billion for the Northrail-Southrail linkage project, P500 million for the Social Housing Finance Corp., P500 million for the half-priced medicine project, P500 million for the PhilHealth insurance program, P500 million for the National Food Authority food program, P500 million for airport development, P500 million for the construction of school buildings, P500 million for high school vouchers, P500 million for the Food-for-School projects, and P500 million for the Barangay and Street Electrification program. She has announced that she would release P1 billion for hiring new cops and the purchase of new cars and guns, not to mention scholarships and higher salaries as well as a P1,000 across-the-board increase in the compensation of government workers.

But given all these generous giveaways and projects being distributed by the President, we wonder how Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye could say with a straight face: "We have already proven that we can bite the bullet for the sake of the economy and the whole world is looking upon us to fully implement our fiscal and economic reforms." The President's P35-billion pump-priming fund for the economy (already in the process of being spent as noted above) will come from "savings" which, she says, was made possible because the government's fiscal team had "overachieved." Since presumably these pump-priming activities signal the end of forced savings, that can't bode well for the deficit-reduction aspect of her fiscal reform program. But the more important question is: Is there rhyme or reason behind the spending that goes beyond larding the military, the bureaucracy and the provinces with patronage?

With the raising of the VAT rate, the government expects to rake in an additional P86 billion in income yearly. Either this income is meant to bring the deficit closer to being eliminated or it is meant to provide a booster-injection of funds to pay for vital investments in necessary infrastructure, social services and other development-spending required for growth. Either way, however, with the administration so obviously eager to spend, spend, spend, the public deserves to know where the money's really going. As Sen. Manuel Roxas II has pointed out, "The people are entitled to tangible benefits from the additional taxes that they pay to the government." He asked if the administration does, indeed, have a plan for spending its new tax income. He said the best way to do this is through a proper discussion of the national budget.

Under normal circumstances, the government would have had a new General Appropriations Act signed around this time of the year. It does not have a budget yet. Considering how thoroughly the President's coalition controls the House of Representatives, and still maintains a sizable number of allies in the Senate, the absence of a budget should be a cause for concern.

The failure to enact a budget means the old budget will be rolled over, so to speak. Which means billions of opportunities for the President and her allies to move around and disburse funds far from the prying eyes of the public or even foreign institutions that are interested in seeing the government put its fiscal house in order. At the very least, in the hands of unscrupulous officials, it affords endless temptations to dip into public funds meant for already-finished projects, to fund an anti-impeachment or pro-Charter change campaign. Politically beneficial as that might be, it doesn't speak well of government's seriousness in spending the public's money either wisely or well.

IN MY FEB. 1 COLUMN, I CRITICIZED THE government policy on squatting. This policy only encourages more squatting and will not solve the problem, I said. It not only treats squatters with kid gloves, it coddles them. Because of it, the government can spend quadrillions of pesos for relocation but in the end there would be more squatters because it gives incentives to squatting.

The Urban Development and Housing Act (UDHA), better known as the Lina Law, and the law that decriminalized squatting (both passed because legislators were counting the votes of squatters) are only partly to blame. The Lina Law has rather strong provisions against opportunists and professional squatters, but local government units, the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH), the Philippine National Police (PNP) and other government agencies do not enforce the law completely. Only the provisions favoring the squatters are enforced.

The law punishes professional squatters (almost half of all squatters are professional) and squatting syndicates (behind every squatter colony is a syndicate with its officers, lawyers, enforcers and collectors) but no professional squatter or squatting syndicate has ever been prosecuted.

Local government units, from the barangay to the municipal and city levels, are supposed to be the first line of defense against the influx of new squatters, but barangay officials, councilors, mayors and even congressmen coddle the squatters because they are voters. Under the Lina Law, officials who coddle squatters are liable for prosecution, but have you heard of any local government official prosecuted for doing so?

A presidential decree provides that squatters living within the sites of government infrastructure projects such as streets, buildings, rail lines and waterways can be ejected summarily and are not entitled to government relocation programs. The Lina Law also called for a census of squatters—the deadline for which passed several years ago—after which those who are not listed can also be ejected summarily and without government help. Yet the DPWH and other government agencies have spent and are still spending billions of pesos to relocate and pay off squatters who are not entitled to them. That is because the DPWH and other government agencies are afraid of squatters.

As I See It

For the Northrail project, the government is spending several billions, about half of the cost of the railroad itself, to relocate the squatters on the rail line, although the laws do not provide for that. But the squatters still complain.

Although the government spends a lot of money to acquire and develop the relocation sites and physically transfer squatters, they sell the rights to the lots and houses assigned to them and then go back to squatting, expecting to be relocated again and earn some more. That is why when a street is about to be constructed, squatters flock to the site, expecting to be relocated and paid off by the government. The government seems to be pouring taxpayers' money into a bottomless pit without making a dent on the squatting problem. It rewards incorrigible lawbreakers, the squatters, at the expense of law-abiding taxpayers.

When will the government wake up?

After the Lettermen, the Four Aces and Andy Williams, can the Tlongco Brothers be far behind? There is a revival of geriatric singers everywhere. This is probably a backlash to the contemporary pop music which is noise being passed off as music and insipid and non-sensical words being passed off as song lyrics. For the romantics, there is nothing like the old songs with beautiful melodies and even more beautiful lyrics.

Because most journalists are romantics, Samahang Plaridel, the association of journalists, will make the Tlongco Brothers and Mari Nallos, the Crystal Voice of Asia, sing love songs at the Front Page piano bar for three consecutive nights—Feb. 13, 14 and 15.

Why three nights? So that you can bring your wife to the Front Page on Feb. 14, Valentine's Day, and your girlfriend on Feb. 13 and 15. This is probably your last chance to do this before the Imee Marcos bill against unfaithful spouses is passed by Congress.

In recognition of the poverty of journalists, tickets for the shows are priced ridiculously low: only P250 for the Feb. 13 and 15 shows, and P350 for the Valentine's Day show.

Tickets are available at the Front Page piano bar and the office of Samahang Plaridel, both on T.M. Kalaw Street, Manila, across the street from the National Library on Rizal Park. For more details and ticket reservations, please call Tel. Nos. 252-1560 (Amy), 523-3367 (Nelly) or cell phone number 0916-568-1357.

Going back to the anti-unfaithful spouse bill filed by (who else?) Representatives Imee Marcos and Liza Masa, it punishes with six years imprisonment the cheating husband or wife. The bill is quite liberal in its definition of "unfaithful" and "cheating." The erring spouse does not necessarily have to have sex with the third party. If he/she is caught in a "romantic" mood with somebody, he/she would immediately be liable for prosecution.

But wouldn't it be bad for the economy? It would put nightspots and hospitality girls out of business. Husbands would be staying home with their wives night after night. Think of the birth rate.

What the Court really said about Edsa 2

THIS WEEK, I JOURNEY ONCE MORE INTO legal history to prepare for the coming 20th anniversary of People Power. The first misconception is that the Supreme Court went gaga over Edsa 2. After all, didn't the justices swear in Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on that historic Saturday noon in January 2001? Didn't they vote 13-0 to throw out former President Joseph Estrada's case questioning the validity of GMA's oath-taking?

In a lecture I gave in May 2001, during the centennial celebration of the Supreme Court, I pointed out that many justices concurred only "in the result," not in their reasoning. Beware the "hooting throng," they warned, lest we "court instability and anarchy."

Justice Reynato Puno's majority opinion held that Erap had resigned but also warned, in relation to Erap's plunder trial, about the "impatient vehemence of the majority." "Rights in a democracy are not decided by the mob whose judgment is dictated by rage and not by reason. Nor are rights necessarily resolved by the power of numbers, for in a democracy, the dogmatism of the majority is not and should never be the definition of the rule of law."

Justice Jose Vitug closed his opinion with what he called an "elder's reminder" and called for "great sobriety and extreme circumspection." We must not be "oblivious to the innate perils of People Power for no bond can be stretched far too much to its breaking point." He asked: "Where does one draw the line between the rule of law and the rule of the mob, or between People Power and Anarchy?"

Justice Vicente Mendoza, joined by Justice Bernardo Pardo, recognized that the right to rebel, while not a constitutional principle, is a natural right which "even then, must be exercised only for weighty and serious reasons." He held that Erap had become permanently disabled because he had lost the public's trust, but he cautioned against "extravagant claims of the right of the people to change their government" outside of the constitutional framework.

Justice Josue Bellosillo similarly held that Erap had been permanently disabled, but detected "strong temptations of the moment to effect change extra-legally" and confessed that "rumblings of a forthcoming tempest crossed [his] mind" as he witnessed Edsa 2.

Raul C. Pangalangan

Justice Santiago Kapunan called People Power a "vague and ambiguous" concept ("amorphous and indefinable," said Justice Consuelo Ynares-Santiago) and stated bluntly that it "is not one of the modes ... to create a vacancy in the office of the President." How many "irate citizens" would it take to constitute People Power? he asked. The people have the right to assemble and protest. "But this right does not go to the extent of directly acting to remove the President from office by means outside the framework of the Constitution."

Finally, Justice Ynares-Santiago asked: "At what stage do people assembled en masse become a mob? And when do the actions of a mob, albeit unarmed or well-behaved, become people power?" She concluded: "This Court should never validate the action of a mob and declare it constitutional." For her, the majority opinion was "this Court's legitimization through suffering [that] may have the effect of encouraging People Power Three, People Power Four and People Power ad infinitum."

Still the Court, in the end, "declare[d] as a fact what in fact exists" and acknowledged that GMA was president. GMA's partisans at Edsa 2, by their loose and careless rhetoric, may have unleashed a tempting normative framework for Edsa 3 (as I stated in 2001) and an Edsa 4 (as now portends 2006).

The second misconception is that the Edsa 2 decision was a repeat of the earlier Edsa 1 ruling. Far from it. For Edsa 1, the Court conceded that Cory had come to power extra-constitutionally, but its legitimacy was "not a justiciable matter [but] belongs to the realm of politics where only the people ... are the judge."

In contrast, the Court squarely rejected that reasoning for Edsa 2. While the first Edsa was truly revolutionary, the second Edsa was squarely accomplished within the Constitution. And the Court went to creative lengths to find the "totality of prior, contemporaneous, and posterior facts and ... evidence," coupled with actual acts of relinquishing the office, showing that Erap had resigned.

Why didn't the Court take the path of least resistance and wash its hands exactly the way it did for Edsa 1? Or why didn't the Court follow the view of some justices that Erap had been "permanently disabled"? Because either way, would have opened the "floodgates" of People Power and allowed the ouster of a sitting president through induced political paralysis.

From a larger view, the Court could not have invoked its Edsa 1 ruling because GMA lacked the unimpeachable mandate enjoyed by Cory Aquino in 1986. Strategically, neither did GMA call herself revolutionary the way Cory did, because for as long as the constitutional line of succession was kept, GMA as vice president would trump other contenders. She had her cake, and ate it too. Thus the "constitutional awkwardness" of Edsa 2.

Should it happen that Ms Arroyo is ousted through another Edsa, she will be on the receiving end of these Supreme Court decisions. Vis-à-vis Edsa 1, she will be in the shoes of Marcos, holding a Batasan proclamation of victory that, only his partisans believed. Vis-à-vis Edsa 2, she will be in the same boat as Erap, her government paralyzed through "withdrawal of support" by various centers of power, including the military and civil society.

Yet, if she is ousted via an outright coup without the moral cover of People Power, she will seize the constitutional upper hand. What a dreadful sight! One moment she is the tainted President who conspired with Garcia to debase the Constitution, and the next she is the indignant guardian of the constitutional faith.

Bishops as politicians

FORMER BRITISH PRIME MINISTER HAROLD Macmillan once said, "If people want a sense of purpose, they should get it from their archbishop. They should certainly not get it from their politicians."

But the question is: What if bishops turn politicians?

The issue is compounded by the element that when bishops promulgate pronouncements on state affairs, there is a mystical aura which suggests that their pastoral pronouncements are the voice of God, speaking through the bishops.

This brings us to a related issue raised by another politician. It is said that during the American Civil War, a visitor to the White House told President Abraham Lincoln, "God is on our side." To which, without batting an eyelash, Lincoln replied: "We trust, sir, that God is on our side. It is more important to know that we are on God's side."

On Jan. 29, the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines issued a two-part pastoral statement. The first, titled "Renewing Our Public Life Through Moral Values," covered political concerns that have to do with the political crisis of the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo. The other concerned an economic issue and called for the repeal of mining laws. The two themes comprise a comprehensive agenda which raised the question whether the bishops have expanded their intervention in state affairs beyond the safe limits of separation between Church and State. Another question is whether the bishops are biting more of the secular stuff than they can swallow. Some would ask: Why don't the bishops get elected and run the country, instead of politicians, so they can be covered by the rule of public accountability?

The CBCP's pastoral statement was much awaited, since there has been mounting public pressure on the bishops to clarify their pastoral letter of July 10, 2005, in which they did not join the clamor for the resignation of President Arroyo, but which left open three options for the resolution of the crisis: voluntary resignation, impeachment, and creation of a truth commission to inquire into allegations that the President had manipulated the 2004 elections.

The second and third modes did not materialize. Having survived the crisis of July 8 and the impeachment complaint last September, the President is unlikely to step down voluntarily. With the changed condition, the pastoral statement of July 10 was overtaken by events and the Church is no longer in a pivotal position, like it was on July 10, to determine the fate of the Arroyo administration.

The Jan. 29 statement took the bishops out of the ambiguity of their July 10 statement and stands out for its clarity in examining the issues of the crisis, now in a state of impasse. With their recent statement, the bishops have shown a better respect for empirical evidence on the political reality than they had last July. Their latest statement did not mince words, while the previous one left many in doubt as to whether the hierarchy was siding with the President, although their decision left no doubt that it gave her some breathing space.

Nothing can be more emphatic and specific about the bishops' position than this opening statement: "We have all observed the failure of political processes to make public servants accountable for wrongdoing."

"What we have seen instead are acts of evasion and obstruction of the truth, as in the case of the wiretapping and the Garcillano controversy."

"While we acknowledge that patriotic and sincere Filipinos have heeded our call in July 2005 for accountability in public office and sought means for the truth to emerge, we also witness those who seem to use 'the search for truth' as a means of furthering their political ambitions."

"As a result of all this, there seems to be a paralyzing gridlock in the political sphere."

These assessments are empirically verifiable. They therefore carry more weight than the pious fictions of bishops whose rhetoric has been long on rash judgments and short on evidence. Therein lies the merit of the Jan. 29 statement. This time, the bishops have chosen to resist the temptation to play political rabble-rousers and pander to the gallery of a hostile public calling for blood.

The pastoral statement is clear about what to do next.

First, the search for truth must be "relentlessly pursued through structures and processes mandated by law and our Constitution."

"They did not really pursue the truth," said the CBCP president, Archbishop Angel Lagdameo, referring to the killing of the impeachment complaint against Ms. Arroyo last September. "They stopped at technicalities."

Second, electoral reforms should be urgently taken, beginning with the resignation or even prosecution of a number of Commission on Elections officials and the modernization of the election counting process.

Third, the 2007 elections "should not be cancelled."

Fourth, the bishops do not support "hasty efforts" to change the Constitution and said revision "is best done through a constitutional convention."

These proposals constitute a manageable framework of political action that is not driven by any illusion that when bishops speak, they are the voice of God and God is on their side. The bishops' return to clarity does not, however, close the issue of whether their political activism has crossed the boundaries separating Church and State. That is a more disturbing issue than the survival or demise of the Arroyo regime, although it is in the public interest that the latter issue is resolved by 2007.

A 'medical oasis'

AT LARGE

Rina Jimenez-David

THE STORY IS TOLD ABOUT A POLITICIAN who recently passed away. He had gone to Texas to seek treatment for his ailment, but spent two weeks waiting in vain for an appointment with the world-renowned specialist recommended to him. When his health situation took a turn for the worse, the politician was confined in a hospital in another state and that was where he died.

Of course, there are no guarantees in life—or in death. But one would have thought that being a prominent public official, as well as having the capacity to pay, would have assured the man the best medical treatment in the world. Then again, neither could his family and friends be assured that even if he did get the treatment he sought, he would still be alive today.

But one could still improve the odds. For many wealthy Filipinos—and even not-so-wealthy ones pushed to the brink of desperation—the last-ditch stand in their battle for survival is often taken abroad, usually after local specialists tell them they have done everything that could be done within their competence. And for many of them, this means traveling to Houston, Texas, where the Texas Medical Center has gained international renown, especially for the treatment of cardiovascular diseases and cancer.

In town until Sunday is a group composed of prominent cancer specialists and representatives of St. Luke's Episcopal Health System (SLEH), the "principal health care institution" within the Texas Medical Center. The group is here primarily to conduct "exploratory" talks with Filipino doctors, medical institutions and even policymakers. "We're here to partner with you," said Warren Whitehead, assistant vice president for international services of SLEH. "We're not coming as conquering Americans out to take over the Philippine health system."

ACTUALLY, SLEH and its affiliates within the Texas Medical Center already have a foot in the local market by way of the Houston Medical Group (HMG), which represents the institution in the country. Headed by "goodwill ambassador" Leo de Leon, a Filipino businessman who came home in 1997 after 18 years living in Houston, HMG has developed a program together with leading US-trained Filipino physicians to provide patients and their family "access to world-class medical services, ensuring confidentiality, customer care, and cultural sensitivity."

HMG provides Filipino clients with two types of services. One is the "virtual second opinion," where it sends a patient's medical records to Texas to be reviewed by specialists who will render a second opinion that includes treatment options. If needed, HMG could also arrange for a conference call with SLEH for immediate consultation.

Should the client decide to go for treatment in Houston, HMG could "manage the entire process before, during and after" one's stay, including setting priority appointments and confirmation with the specialists of one's choice, pre-registration for admission to SLEH, a pre-departure briefing, and even airport assistance, translation assistance, and a nurse liaison during one's stay in Texas.

It's the "depth of care" that is available at TMC that puts it way above other health institutions, De Leon believes. "We have a unique resource in that one has access not just to one hospital, or one research institution, but to more than 40 institutions and all the expertise, technology and research work in them."

TMC is a real "medical city" with over 42 institutions, including 13 hospitals and 11 schools, all clustered together in an area roughly the size of Makati. In 2004, it registered 5.2 million patients, about 10,000 of them from over 80 countries outside the United States. SLEH alone has five "centers of excellence": the Texas Heart Institute headed by world-renowned cardiovascular surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley, the Texas Cancer Institute, the Texas Liver Institute, the Texas Urology Institute, and the Texas Lung Institute.

FOR this visit, De Leon brought over two top specialists from SLEH. Dr. Brian Miles, medical director of the Texas Cancer Institute and a leading authority on urology, and Dr. Sewa Legha, director of SLEH's Melanoma Center.

"I am very impressed with the physicians we've talked to and the institutions we've visited," says Dr. Miles, adding that he sensed "a strong desire to learn more" among the Filipinos. In Houston, he said, they have not just a truly international patient base, but equally important, a multinational staff. "We want the best in the business. It doesn't matter what country you're from. We're also aware that diseases have different pathologies and having a rich resource of doctors from around the world helps us understand and treat these."

At present, aside from Manila, SLEH has satellite offices in Lima, Peru and Milan, Italy.

"I like to think of Texas Medical Center as a medical oasis," says Whitehead, ever the salesman. He has a point, though. It's rare to find such a concentration of medical talent, cutting-edge technology and the latest advances in research, from all around the world, in one place. For desperate patients, Houston might well represent hope and time, just when they're running out of both.

OOPS! I have no excuses, but I made an error in Wednesday's column on the Comelec and the coming 2007 elections. I said the commissioners had wasted P5 billion of the people's money in the botched "modernization" program. The real figure is "only" P2.3 billion—still a sizable figure, and still money paid for by taxpayers. And yes, the election commissioners, starting with Chair Benjamin Abalos, should still resign and not insist that impeachment is the only way they can be forced out of office.

The first shot

LOOKING BACK

Ambeth R Ocampo

October 1899. "He worked as a house painter or an undertaker, and spent many years convincing Army doctors that his ulcers and malaria were service-related." In history books we have two pictures of him, one standing and facing the camera, the other crouching and aiming his rifle.

His own account of the event goes:

"That night, about 8 o'clock, [Orville] Miller and I—there were two of us—were cautiously pacing our district. We came to a fence and were trying to see what the Filipinos were up to. Suddenly, near at hand, on our left, there was a low unmistakable Filipino outpost signal whistle. [This] was immediately answered by a similar whistle, about 25 yards to the right. Then a red lantern flashed its signal from Blockhouse No. 7. We had never seen such a sign before. In a moment something rose slowly up not 20 feet in front of us. It was a Filipino. I yelled, 'Halt!' and made it pretty loud, for I was accustomed to challenging the officer of the guard in approved military style. The man moved. I challenged him with another 'Halt!' Then he imprudently shouted, 'Alto!' at me. Well, I thought the best thing to do was to shoot him. He dropped. If I didn't kill him, I guess he died of fright."

"Then two Filipinos sprang out of the gateway about 15 feet from us. I called 'Halt!' and Miller fired and dropped one. I saw another was left. Well, I think I got my second Filipino that time. We retreated to where our six other fellows were and I said: 'Line up, fellows, the niggers are in here all through these yards.' We then retreated to the pipe line and got behind the water main and stayed there all night. It was some minutes after our second shots before the Filipinos began firing."

There is no mention of the San Juan Bridge in Grayson's narrative. We are described as "niggers" and the account does not state that a few days before the shooting, there was friction between the American and Filipino troops because the latter would cross a road from Blockhouse 7 to Blockhouse 6 and in so doing passed American lines. One also wonders whether the Filipino soldier knew what "Halt!" meant. In the darkness, I imagine that when the Filipino answered back "Alto!" he was probably smiling and waving his hand in a friendly gesture but was met with a bullet. This is a part of our history we know so well, but when studied in school we are not made to imagine or reconstruct what actually happened and why it led to the Philippine-American War.

While browsing through issues of a little known magazine called The Philippines Gossip, I came across an article by Col. H.B. Mulford, titled "The First shot of the Philippine Insurrection," that long ago already stated that the event did not happen on San Juan Bridge:

"It has been generally supposed that the first shot fired on that memorable night was fired on San Juan Bridge; this is a mistaken impression; in fact, it has been generally reported that both the American and Filipino sentries stationed at either end of the San Juan bridge remained at their posts during the entire night, and that neither fired at the other."

Where did the story of San Juan Bridge come from? Why do some people persist in perpetuating the story of the bridge in the light of current research that says the shot was fired on Sociego Street?

Sayonara

SHE WAS SULLEN AND SILENT THE DAY SHE HAD TO leave, back in June, trying to keep back her tears. At 22, she had never been outside of Luzon, never flown on a plane. Now she was going off to Japan, and the six-month deployment seemed like eternity.

She'd call occasionally from Japan, going through the usual kumusta and assurances she was fine. Always she'd talk about the weather—initially the summer heat, then the rains, then the leaves changing colors in the fall, and then the cold starting to set in as winter approached.

Then she was home, in time for Christmas.

She was delighted to be home, to be reunited with the family, but she was also missing her friends back in Japan. She had pictures of all her ates and her Filipina mama-san. She cried showing the digital pictures taken during their despedida at the club, with a large banner that read "Sayonara!"

Her cell phone rang incessantly, with calls from other Filipinas she had befriended, some back here in the Philippines, others still in Japan. There were also calls from her Japanese guests. She had picked up a fair amount of Japanese, but her conversations were peppered with Filipino. The guests had learned words like "talaga," "totoo," "bola," "salbahe ka" and "tang na." No, she said, most of them had never been to the Philippines, but promised they'd come over to visit.

'Lapad'

Was there someone special? Yes, she smiled, like a young schoolgirl with a crush. And he too had promised to visit some time, and help out.

Help was a word she was hearing now all too frequently from relatives calling in: Your niece is sick, please help. Mer-alco's cutting our electricity next week, please help.

Her contract stated she'd get $2,000 a month. That would have been $12,000 for six months—P660,000 at P55 to a dollar, which was the rate when she left. While in Japan, she received a living allowance of 1,500 yen a week (about P750). The rest, they told her, she would get once she returned from Japan.

She went straight from the airport to the agency to collect. She knew there would be all kinds of deductions for her passport, visa, ticket, dancing lessons, board and lodging, even cosmetics. The agency had it all computed, and also referred to the dollar and the yen dropping. They gave her P15,000.

But she had expected that, lucky that she was still getting some money. She had worked hard for the tips, and had done well, her tips coming to about 60 "lapad," each being 10,000 yen. There were to be endless trips to money changers. She'd walk past a dealer and they could tell she had yen, calling out "four five" or P4,500 for every lapad. With some hard bargaining she could get P4,500, but by January, the changers were adamant about P4,500. Exchange rates were bad, they said.

Sixty lapad at P4,500 each comes to P270,000—not bad at all for six months of work. But if money came in fairly easily, it's been spent quite quickly, thanks to all the requests for help. Two months after returning home, she's exchanged almost 20 lapad.

Disneyland

She had her pasahung prepared, sent in advance in two balikbayan boxes, dispatched through one of the many door-to-door delivery services.

There was anticipation as the boxes and suitcases were opened, the gifts brimming over. They were all from her guests: lots of Nissin seafood-flavored instant noodles, several types of Meiji chocolates, seaweeds, seaweed crackers and cookies (without seaweeds). But those only counted as pasahung. She still had to buy Christmas gifts, and that she did in 168.

There were oohs and aahs around the noodles: so much more ingredients. Look, real shrimp!

Days later, she said she'd checked the local Japanese groceries. The instant noodles were selling for P95 each. It was a bit like the days of Clark and PX, "stateside" goods being extra special if they came out direct from boxes that smelled like America.

But the boxes from Japan were odorless. She talked about how obsessed the Japanese were with cleanliness. She'd brought back a bit of that obsession, in the form of Japanese laundry powder.

She was working in a city about an hour-and-a-half away from Tokyo. One of her guests had picked her up early one morning for an outing. They drove through Tokyo but didn't get off. Their destination was Tokyo Disneyland, where they spent the day and where she got mostly stuffed animals. Then they had to rush back so she could get to work. That was the only time she left the city where she was working.

Her balikbayan box yielded a menagerie of stuffed animals and Disney characters. Besides the food and detergent and stuffed toys, there were the ababut or trinkets, Hello Kitty types, mostly pink. She described stores that sold these trinkets, where everything cost 100 yen each (about P45).

Maybe, she thought, she could open a store and sell the trinkets. But her father wanted a tricycle, her mother a house and lot. Her brother's due to start high school in June.

Timers

She worries about her diminishing lapad, especially with friends warning her the exchange rate was dropping. When she left back in June, you could get P5,000 for each lapad.

She doubts if she can go back. The Japanese government used to allow 80,000 Filipina entertainers each year, then cut it down to 8,000. The recruiting agencies protested, came out with full-page ads appealing to the government to intervene. Both the Japanese and Philippine governments stood their ground so it's unlikely there will be too many "timers"—those who go back, a second, a third, a fourth time. Timers are a different lot, smarter, "mas wa-is", and that wasn't supposed to mean wisery; it's just that they don't cry as much when they were away.

Japan's beautiful, she keeps repeating, and the Japanese are very nice, mabait. At the same time, Japan and the Japanese remain mysterious. She never entered a Japanese home. She saw Japanese mothers with their babies, oh but the babies were always so fat, and she'd think of the baby she'd left back home.

She'd never heard of tea ceremonies, or ikebana and flower arranging. She did learn to use chopsticks, and to eat sashimi. And the day after she came home, she bought Japanese rice at P70 a kilo because she missed it.

She saw Japan's changing seasons from her apartment windows and on her walk to the club, every day at around 6 in the evening. But what she saw of Japan, she interpreted always through the lens of home. The rains made her sad, her longing for home turning for the worse as days got shorter, and colder.

It was good to be home. But it'd be nice to go again. The agency says maybe they can find a placement for her in Korea. That's where everyone goes now, she says.

GMA forms body to probe mine spill

DENR clears Lafayette of mercury use

By Blanche S. Rivera

THE DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES yesterday rushed to the defense of Lafayette Mining Inc., backing the company's claim that it was not using mercury in its gold mining project in Rapu-Rapu, Albay.

The mercury found by environmentalists in areas surrounding the Rapu-Rapu Polymetallic Project site in Albay could have come from nearby active volcanoes, like the Mayon Volcano, and natural evaporation of bodies of water.

Previous geological studies have also revealed that there is a mercury deposit in Albay.

"The DENR is continuously collecting water samples from the project area and the affected water bodies but there is no sufficient evidence to attribute mercury contamination to the operations of the Rapu-Rapu mine," the DENR said in a statement yesterday.

The DENR released the findings late yesterday after an environmentalist group announced that toxic heavy metals were found in sediment samples from the area surrounding the Lafayette mine site.

"The presence of heavy metals such as cadmium, chromium, lead, arsenic and mercury from the sediment samples analyzed is to be expected because the project area inherently contains these metals," the DENR said.

The unusually high levels of metals indicate the economic viability of mining in the area as gold and copper deposits are associated with such metals.

With David Hayes

POLANGUI, ALBAY—PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo ordered a thorough investigation of the mine spill in Rapu-Rapu, Albay following a statement made by the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines opposing continued mining in the country.

The President, who was here to inaugurate infrastructure projects, also announced the release of P10 million to fishermen who suffered losses in income after a fish scare gripped several fishing villages in Sorsogon and Albay.

During her visit, Ms Arroyo authorized the forming of an independent commission to look into the operations of Lafayette Mining Inc.

The President made the move following a meeting with members of the CBCP in Malacanan Monday. Part of the meeting's agenda was mining.

Commission members will be selected by bishops in the Bicol region, who initiated the dialogue on the Lafayette issue with the President.

The bishops had designated Sorsogon Bishop Arturo Bastes as spokesperson and authorized him to choose the commission's members.

Michael Defensor, Ms Arroyo's chief of staff and former environment secretary, said the government could not unilaterally cancel the mining permits that the government already granted.

"The government has contractual obligations that went with the permit, especially since the investors have already infused some $300 to $400 million into their operations," Defensor said.

He, however, said the mining firms must continue to prove the technical worthiness of their operations, from their standard operating procedures to engineering works.

The government, he added, would not hesitate to shut down any mining company that would violate the conditions in their permits and environmental laws.

Ms Arroyo said the P10 million financial help for fishermen will be co-ordinated through the Regional Disaster Coordinating Council (RDCC) who will closely coordinate with a committee to be headed by Msgr. Francisco Monje of the Sorsogon diocese.

The assistance was approved with the intercession of business tycoon Loida Nicolas-Lewis.

Julito Sarmiento, Lafayette corporate secretary and director, said Lafayette was willing to help the commission in its investigation.

Ms Arroyo said funds for the commission's operations will come from Lafayette. Bobby Labalan, Leo Ganace and Michael Jaucian, PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

SOLDIERS patrol a village in Tarlac following clashes with communist guerrillas that sent residents fleeing.

Troops keep villagers out of Tarlac homes

By Tonette Orejas
PDI Central Luzon Desk

CAMP OLIVAS, PAMPANGA—AT least 3,000 residents who fled Tuesday's clashes between government troops and communist rebels in Sta. Ignacia, Tarlac, have yet to return home.

Sta. Ignacia Mayor Reynaldo Modomo said the plan of the residents of Barangays Sta. Inez West, East and Centro to return to their villages was still not possible on Thursday as military officers ordered them to wait until soldiers conclude clearing operations in the areas.

"We're told these are preventive measures meant to put our people to safety," he said.

He said social welfare workers were monitoring if civilians were killed or hurt in the clashes and in the air raids done by the military in villages where the fighting broke out.

The military recovered at least 10 bodies of slain New People's Army rebels. A soldier was killed while four others were wounded in the series of encounters.

As the gunfights raged, Modomo said Sta. Ignacia residents, many of them Ilocano farmers, left the villages and went to the houses of their relatives. Some have tried sneaking back into the hilly villages during the day to check on their crops and farm animals.

Modomo, however, said his people were not complaining of food shortage.

"The situation is under control. But they really wanted to go home soon," he said.

Col. Ricardo Garcia, chief of the Army's 702nd Infantry Brigade, denied ordering an evacuation in the three villages.

In a separate interview, Lt. Col. Gregory Cayetano, commander of the 71st Infantry Battalion that engaged some 40 rebels on Tuesday, said the residents left voluntarily after they were advised to stay out of harm's way.

"We don't want to use them or be used by the rebels as shields," Cayetano said.

Garcia said a few residents had tried to return on Wednesday but left in haste after they received reports that NPA rebels planned to attack the villages. He said he pulled out some soldiers to reduce tension there.

ROUNDUP

5 killed in Bulacan attack

SAN ILDEFONSO, Bulacan—Five people were shot and killed by unidentified men in a farm in Barangay Pinaod here on Wednesday night. Chief Insp. Emma Libunao, town police chief, said at least 15 men barged into the house of Ricardo Valmocina, 61, at 9 p.m., looking for guns supposedly kept by the family. When the suspects failed to find any firearm, they searched the family's belongings. Valmocina and his son, Roel Joseph, 19, tried to stop the suspects but were shot. The suspects took P100,000 worth of jewelry, cash and four cellular phones from the family, police said. They also shot and killed farm caretaker Melchor Cardinal, 24, Michael Malumay, 19, and one identified only as Jojo.

Holiday in Bulacan for Ople

MALACANANG declared tomorrow, Feb. 3, a special non-working holiday in Bulacan to mark the 79th birthday of the late senator Blas Ople. Ople, also foreign affairs secretary at the time of his death, was cited in Proclamation No. 981 as a "model to the Filipino people, especially to Bulakenyos." Family and friends will celebrate Mass at the Libingan ng mga Bayani in Fort Bonifacio. Another Mass will be offered at the St. Anne's Shrine in Hagonoy, Bulacan. A Blas Ople commemorative stamp will be unveiled.

Bus falls off ravine; 8 dead

BAGUIO CITY—Eight people died while 22 others were hurt when the bus they were in plunged into a 200-foot ravine in Kabayan, Benguet on Tuesday. Vicente Tomazac Cordillera director of the Office of Civil Defense, said the driver of the Kabayan-bound Norton bus failed to steer the vehicle away from a curve along the Bokod-Kabayan Road because of a mechanical defect. Among the eight fatalities were Juliet Ingloso, co-guard of the National Museum in Kabayan town, and her son, Christian James. Two victims died while being taken to the Baguio General Hospital and Medical Center.

Fish landing port

CITY OF CALAPAN—Bulacaco mayor Errilo Villas called on the Philippine Fisheries and Development Authority to allot additional funds for the extension of the 30-meter long Bulacaco fish landing port by another 50 meters to allow bigger vessels to come in. This infrastructure improvement is expected to help boost Bulacaco's fishing and tourism industries. Villas cited Bulacaco's huge potential with its 13 islands and beautiful beaches and is just two hours away from Boracay by boat.

Operator blamed for mishaps

CALAMBA CITY—A Laguna-based group on Monday said the private operator of the North Luzon Expressway (NLEx) should be held accountable for the deaths and injuries caused by accidents inside the expressway last week. In a statement, the Road Users Protection Advocates (Rupa) said the recent seven-vehicle smashup inside the NLEx should prompt the government to review its agreement with the Manila North Tollways Corp (MNTC). Three people died in the smashups, including the wife of Subic, Zambales Mayor Jeffrey Khonghuan.

Cavite gov sues 3 tabloids for libel

CALAMBA CITY—For allegedly maligning his character and reputation, Cavite Gov. Ermino "Ayong" Maliksi has filed a P50 million libel suit against three community papers being run by what he called as "bogus mediamen" in the province.

Named respondents in Maliksi's 15-page complaint were Katapat publisher Archie Gadang and staffers Jimmy Saberon and Leonardo Eduave; Tony Tabbad, Rommy Tormo and Cayetano Samuente of Peryodiko; and Rudy Apollito, Michelle Apollito, Reynaldo Apollito and Ed Lara Covinar of Asianstar Weekly.

"In the middle of 2004, these tabloids started publishing articles whose sole objective is to destroy my reputation," he said.

Maliksi's lawyer filed the case at the assistant provincial prosecutor's office in Imus town last Jan. 16, 2006.

The governor said the three tabloids have "engaged in a malicious and systematic campaign to vilify (me) and the provincial government."

The governor said while he respects the freedom of the press to criticize public officials like him, "these tabloids cannot be categorized as part of the free and legitimate press." Marion Ramos, PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

"In this case, the consumers have the right to be informed of ... Meralco's application for the increase of its generation charge," the high tribunal said.

It was the second time in as many years that the Supreme Court had nullified an increase in Meralco rates.

In June 2004, the court voided a 12-centavo per kWh provisional rate increase granted by the ERC to Meralco in the case of the Freedom from Debt Coalition vs ERC.

Voting 8-5, the Supreme Court overruled the decision of the ERC, saying that it was a product of a "blatant and inexcusable" breach of the law.

Among the bases for the decision were Meralco's failure to publish its application for the rate hike and the ERC's failure to resolve the motion of the FDC before acting on Meralco's application.

Homeowners' association

The second case stemmed from a suit filed in 2004 by the National Association of Electricity Consumers for Reforms, the Federation of Village Associations and the Federation of Las Piñas Homeowners Associations.

The petitioners claimed that the rate increase was approved without, among other things, the required publication of Meralco's amended application, which deprived the consumers of a notice to contest it.

Publication is required by the Implementing Rules and Regulations of the Energy Power Industry Reform Act (Epira) of 2001.

In line with Epira, the ERC required all distribution utilities to file applications for the unbundling of rates.

Meralco filed its application for the approval of its unbundled rates and the appraisal of its assets on Dec. 26, 2001.

After hearings, the ERC approved on March 20, 2003, Meralco's unbundled schedule of rates effective in the next billing cycle. The ERC also directed Meralco to stop charging the purchased power adjustment (PPA) upon effectivity of the unbundled rates.

Adjustment mechanism

The commission said any change in the cost of purchased power shall be reflected as deferred charges, which could be recovered through the Generation Rate Adjustment Mechanism (GRAM).

Meralco, at the time, claimed that the proposed generation charge, which was subsequently approved by the ERC, conformed with the generation rate formula under the implementing rules for the recovery of fuel and independent power producer costs.

In its defense, Meralco said "it would be violative of due process to require it to comply [with the publication requirement] ... [because] it would be subjected to a long and tedious process of recovering its fuel and purchased power costs."

The company said GRAM "pays for the fuel and purchased power costs to its suppliers even before it could fully collect from its consumers."

Except for the carrying cost, not a single centavo of GRAM is retained by Meralco. The money is turned over to National Power Corp. and independent power producers from which Meralco buys the electricity it retails to customers.

GRAM allows the quarterly adjustment of the generation charge to reflect the changes in fuel and purchased power costs after a review by the ERC.

Faeldon's support in the military. There are others. I believe there will be more than five. It will depend on the outcome of the debriefing," Kison said.

Marine Privates Lorenzo Caranzo and Hardy Glaraga of the AFP Western Command based in Puerto Princesa City are being held at the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (Isafp) compound in Camp Aguinaldo.

Three other enlisted personnel from Southern Command headquarters in Zamboanga City are also undergoing interrogation there.

But the military refused to identify the three, saying it was not the proper time to do so.

"We don't know yet if they are in-involved ... The debriefing is now being conducted by the AFP Counter Intelligence Group in Zamboanga," said Kison.

Released mutineers

"The common denominator we're looking at is the possibility that they are among the 184 soldiers who were part of the Oakwood mutiny," he said.

The 184 Magdalo soldiers were released in May 2005 after they struck a plea bargain with military prosecutors. They accepted a three-rank demotion and a pay cut for six months in exchange for the dismissal of court-martial charges against them.

Kison justified the interrogation, saying under military law the five soldiers could be detained even though charges had not been filed against them.

Asked by reporters what the detained soldiers had revealed so far, Kison said results of the debriefing had not been released.

On Wednesday, Caranzo and Glaraga were flown to Camp Aguinaldo from Wescom headquarters, one of the four military camps that Faeldon reportedly visited after his Dec. 14 escape.

The three others being interrogated were assigned to Southcom headquarters, which Faeldon was also able to penetrate despite a nationwide manhunt for him.

Links to plot probed

Kison said the soldiers were also being investigated to determine if they were part of the reported coup plot.

"If there are indications that they are part of the plot, of the recruitment, then the necessary action would be conducted by our intelligence and counterintelligence units," he said.

Kison said Faeldon did not directly implicate the soldiers, adding that Afpcig was counterchecking its previous findings with Faeldon's statements.

He said pictures were also recovered from Faeldon. He did not elaborate.

"During the investigation other names may come out. There may be other findings that will lead to other accused, and that's the focus of the Afpcig which is very active on this," Kison said.

Faeldon had also taken videos and pictures of himself at the Camp Crame police general headquarters in Quezon City, the Central Command headquarters in Cebu City and the Camp Aguinaldo military general headquarters itself.

He posted the videos and pictures on his website www.pilipino.org.ph where he announced he was launching a civil disobedience campaign against President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Rivas, a military prosecutor, was transferred on Wednesday from the Isafp compound to the Headquarters Support Command office inside Camp Aguinaldo.

So far, she has not yet met with her family.

Kison said military lawyers had not determined the "extent of her participation ... so they cannot pinpoint the charges against her."

Court visit

Also yesterday, the Makati Regional Trial Court Branch 148 staff completed checks on 27 Magdalo mutineers, including Faeldon, detained in separate facilities after their lawyers expressed the fear that some of the detainees may have been tortured.

"In general, everyone seems OK," said clerk of court Nonilón Tagalacud. "They seemed relaxed. I was allowed to ask whatever questions I had, though there was a (military) escort during the visits," said the lawyer.

He declined to give details before he could report to the court. With reports from Tarrá V. Quis-mundo and Nikko Dizon added Santiago, chair of the Joint Congressional Power Commission.

Napocor president Cyril C. del Callar said that 250 workers had been mobilized to undertake the cleanup which would be completed in three months.

"We are doing everything within our abilities to contain the oil spill and make sure that there will be no major effects on the immediate environment," Del Callar said.

Bad weather

Del Callar blamed bad weather for the incident.

But Napocor spokesperson Dennis Gana said that conditions had improved for a favorable cleanup in coordination with the Philippine Coast Guard and the Department of Environment and Natural Resources.

"The Coast Guard said in a briefing on Tuesday that the weather was favorable and the waves were going to the direction of Semirara and not Boracay," Gana said.

Del Callar said the workers had collected almost 5,700 sacks of oil that were dumped on a temporary site for immediate disposal.

17,000 sacks

Overall, more than 17,000 sacks of contaminated materials from both the shoreline and mangroves had been collected. About four hectares of the total mangrove area of the island had been cleared of oil, he said.

Power Barge 106 is now docked at the Keppel Shipyard in Batangas where it was towed following the accident. Contaminated oil was being removed prior to repairs.

Largest spill in RP

"This is probably the largest oil spill in the Philippines but Napocor is understating the damage. It hasn't reached Boracay but we'll never know with the undercurrent. You must remember that this is heavy crude oil," Angara said.

"And the cleanup has been very slow and very primitive," he added.

He said UP scientists had sent an investigative team and found out that 300 hectares of mangroves, sea grass and coral reefs had already been damaged.

"This is underreported in Manila but it is a big scandal in Panay," he said.

The oil spill occurred on Dec.

195,000 liters

Semirara is part of a group of nine islands of Caluya town, Antique, at the northern tip of Panay Island. It is the site of Semirara Mining Corp., the biggest coal mine in Asia.

A Coast Guard report said the barge was being towed by a tugboat to Oriental Mindoro from Masbate when it was battered by strong winds and waves. It was estimated to be carrying 800,000 liters of bunker oil.

Gana said in a telephone interview that at least 195,000 liters of bunker oil were spilled in the waters off Semirara.

But Santiago said Del Callar told her that only 30,000 liters spilled from the barge.

"I anticipated Senate action by asking (Del Callar) and he said that Napocor takes responsibility for the oil spill because both the sending and the receiving of the oil barge were Napocor facilities and this is a Napocor barge," she said.

"He said they have already released P50 million out of P90 million that Napocor has appropriated for the oil spill and have sought assistance from the Coast Guard and the military," she added.

Remedial measures

Santiago, quoting Del Callar, said that only 40 hectares of marine life, and not 236 hectares, had been affected by the oil spill.

However, the Senate committee on environment and natural resources, headed by Sen. Pia Cayetano, is set to investigate the oil spill and hear a proposed bill to increase penalties on polluters of the country's navigable waters.

"The problem with our many existing environmental laws is that they do not provide protective mechanisms to ensure that damages are paid to the local community and for the rehabilitation of the environment," Cayetano said in a statement.

The committee would also consider Cayetano's bill, SB 1802, which hikes the fine for marine polluters to P5 million from P10,000 to P200,000. It also increases the prison term for violators from the current 30 days to one year to eight to 12 years.

will have a built-in burner that could be used to cook food directly.

The introduction of the 1-kg LPG cylinders should enable even "the poorest of the poor" to avail themselves of LPG for everyday cooking, according to Energy Secretary Raphael Lotilla.

After the increase in the value-added tax (VAT) rate to 12 percent from 10 percent on Feb. 1, an 11-kg LPG cylinder now sells for between P489.20 and P540.25.

Charcoal

The high cost of LPG, Lotilla said, had pushed a number of families to resort to using alternative fuels like charcoal.

He said alternative fuels would eat into the sales of LPG dealers because some households would rather turn to the less expensive fuels than buy cooking gas.

GOING MINI: A dealer checks out the best-selling size of LPG in these days of rising prices. ENRIQUETA

At present, dealers sell LPG in 11-kg cylinders.

Apart from the 11-kg tanks, oil refiner Petron Corp. also sells 7-kg and 2.7-kg cylinders, while Caltex Philippines Inc. offers 5-kg and 2.7-kg tanks.

Total (Philippines) Corp. has 5.5-kg and 2.7-kg cylinders, and Liquefied Petroleum Corp. sells 5-kg and 2.5-kg tanks. It also offers 9-kg tanks, but only in Batangas.

Nation Petroleum Corp. also sells 2.7-kg LPG tanks.

DOE data showed that a 7-kg tank sold for around P342, a 5.5-kg cylinder for P303, a 5-kg cylinder for between P245 and P251, and a 2.7-kg tank for between P148 and P164.

Prices to go down

Lotilla said LPG prices would go down after March, with the end of the winter season in the western hemisphere.

"We hope demand goes down by March," he said.

Even while expecting demand and prices to decline in two months, the DOE remained in constant touch with the country's LPG dealers, asking them to come up with ways to help make LPG more affordable to consumers.

"They're coming back on Wednesday (Feb. 8) to tell us how they can help meet the needs of the poorest families; if they can find a way to keep prices where they are or even bring these lower," he told reporters. "Another option is for oil companies to invest in smaller LPG tanks."

One option that was deemed not viable was for LPG dealers to sell only 8 kg of LPG in their existing 11-kg cylinders, he said.

The idea was junked as the cost of transporting a certain number of 11-kg tanks containing only 8 kg of cooking gas would be the same as that of transporting full 11-kg tanks.

Poorest of the poor

One option being considered is to have "the poorest of the poor" in every barangay go straight to the dealers for their LPG needs, Lotilla said.

This way, these households would not be subjected to the charges that middlemen impose on top of the dealer price of LPG, he said.

"But what we're trying to see is how we can implement it. We'll have something concrete by next week," he said.

To help workers cope with the impact of the higher VAT rate, the Employers Confederation of the Philippines yesterday urged Congress to hasten the passage of a law that would raise the threshold for income tax exemptions.

Ecop president Rene Y. Soriano said the proposed law, which has been approved at the House committee level, was aimed at restructuring the country's income tax system and raising tax exemptions for low- and middle-income earners.

Discontent

"Workers' take-home pay would have to be improved to enable them to cope with rising (prices of commodities)," Soriano said. "Adjusting the tax exemption is a way that would address this need without hurting the pockets of employers and businesses."

Ecop chair Miguel B. Varela said the measure was needed to stem the tide of discontent and prevent labor unrest.

FOR TWO YEARS NOW, THE SOUTHERN Police District (SPD) has earned the reputation of being Metro Manila's top police force.

SPD Director Chief Supt. Wilfredo Garcia credits the achievement to his men who "risk their lives to perform their jobs on the streets."

The SPD was recognized by the National Capital Region Police Office as the best police district in Metro Manila for 2005 as it marked the 15th anniversary of the Philippine National Police yesterday at Camp Bagong Diwa, Taguig City.

"I don't take the credit. It really belongs to them," Garcia said in an interview yesterday, adding that the increased police visibility in the seven cities in southern Metro Manila also proved effective in deterring the commission of heinous and petty crimes.

Garcia admitted that 2005 has been quite a rocky year for the SPD with violent incidents in the district like the bombing of a bus on Ayala on Valentine's Day that left four people dead and 60 people injured, the murder of career diplomat Alicia Ramos in her Makati house in April and the massacre of a family in Taguig in June.

"But we solved all these crimes with the arrest of the culprits," he said, adding that SPD's crime solution efficiency was tagged at 95 percent last year.

End to controversy

In a related development, Metro Manila's most senior police official yesterday told a police district that protesting the results of the annual competition was "childish."

But Director Vidal Querol clearly wanted the controversy to die down.

"Protesting through the media... was childish," said Querol, National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) chief. "If you want to be No. 1, you should work as one and work to be No. 1."

Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte Jr. had earlier protested the selection of the Manila Police District (MPD) as the top Metro Manila police force of 2005, saying the honor should have gone to the QCPD.

Querol said Chief Supt. Nicasio Radovan, the head of the Quezon City Police District (QCPD), did not take up the issue with members of the committee which picked the winner.

"Supt. Radovan already said his piece and so did Mayor Belmonte, so that's the end of it," said Querol. "I'm supposed to be the father to this men. I don't want to be seen as fighting with my sons."

POSTSCRIPT TO EXPLOSION

Court employees get bomb threats

By Margaux C. Ortiz

THREE DAYS AFTER A PILLBOX EXPLODED in front of their building on Orosa St., Manila, employees of the Court of Appeals (CA) received two bomb threats from unidentified callers early yesterday morning.

The Manila Police District's Explosive Ordinance Disposal Section (MPD-EODS) reported that a court security guard received a call at around 12.30 a.m. from an unidentified man who warned about explosives planted in the building.

Another court employee received a similar phone call a few hours later, prompting the police to check the building for bombs. They found nothing.

The police had earlier declared a Metrowide alert as a blast rocked the CA building last Monday. Authorities earlier discovered a bag containing dynamite sticks and blasting caps in the bag of construction worker Zaldy Munda, a passenger of Light Rail Transit Line-2. Munda told police the dynamite was intended for a fishpond project in Antipolo City. MPD director Chief Supt. Pedro Bulaong, however, downplayed the explosion in front of the building, saying it was caused by a pillbox thrown by warring street gangs.

However, a group that called itself Tabak or Taong Bayan at Kawal ng Pilipinas immediately claimed responsibility for the incident, according to a television news report.

The group demanded the resignation of President Macapagal-Arroyo, Armed Forces chief Gen. Generoso Senga, and other military officials allegedly involved in the "Hello Garci" controversy.

In a separate incident, two vintage bombs were unearthed in two different sites by construction workers in Manila. A 105 mm unexploded explosive ordnance was dug up inside the Araullo High School campus on United Nations Avenue in Ermita, Manila, at around 3:15 p.m. Wednesday. Yesterday morning, an 81 mm mortar was also unearthed at 1230 Juaming St., Sampaloc, Manila.

The explosives were brought to the MPD headquarters for safekeeping and proper disposition.

Arroceros forest park to remain closed — for now

By Tina G. Santos

THE CONTROVERSIAL ARROCEROS Forest Park in Manila will remain closed despite a plea from professional artists to reopen it to the public.

Luisa Quiñones, Division of City Schools Superintendent, said the park was closed for the public's safety because of the ongoing construction of a two-story building for teachers in the area.

"We're afraid that if we open it now, an accident might occur and we would be held responsible," she told the INQUIRER.

The park will be reopened as soon as work on the building is completed, Quiñones added.

Several professional artists had asked the city government to reopen the forest park, saying they draw inspiration from its lush foliage.

"I hope the city officials understand that and heed our plea," artist Leo Menses said.

He added that even their livelihood has been affected by the park's closure. A portion of the proceeds from the sale of their art work goes to Winner Foundation, the park caretaker.

Winner is locked in a court battle with the Manila City government. The foundation claims it has been given a 15-year contract to develop the park, but the local government said the contract is not valid.

Meanwhile, Menses and other artists said they will join the park clean-up drive, a project initiated by Winner, on Sunday.

Winner president Regina Paterno had earlier accused the city government of dumping garbage like metal scrap and old Christmas decorations inside the park.

"It could be the start of the forest's conversion into a dump," Paterno warned.

Suspected wire thief nabbed in Navotas

THE STREETS leading to the Navotas Centennial Park were dark after a suspected thief cut the electrical wires of specially designed lanterns on M. Naval Street Wednesday night. "We were surprised to see the lantern lights go out. When we checked, we saw the suspect holding a bunch of electrical wires," said Willy Andaya, a barangay official. The fish-shaped lanterns were used during the town's centennial celebration two weeks ago, but Andaya said they decided to continue using the lights "because it's nice to look at and it represents the town's major industry." "We were supposed to bring the lights down in April or before the Holy Week for safekeeping, but now we have no choice but to buy replacement wires," he added. The suspected thief, Lito Olzon 45, a resident of Tanyag, Malabon City, was turned over to the police for investigation.

8 nabbed in QC 'jueteng' raid

By Luigi A. del Puerto and Jocelyn R. Uy

SEVERAL HOURS AFTER INSISTING that his district should have been adjudged the best Metro police district in 2005, the chief of the Quezon City Police District (QCPD) was ordered to relieve one of his officers for jueteng.

National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) chief Director Vidal Querol on Wednesday night ordered QCPD director Chief Supt. Nicasio Radovan to relieve Supt. Felicidad Gido, the head of the Fairview police station, for failing to stop jueteng in the area.

Hours before Gido's relief, a team from the NCRPO intelligence unit raided the Maligaya Parkland Subdivision at the boundary of Fairview and Novaliches and arrested eight people who were allegedly conducting a jueteng draw.

They were identified as Jomar Naz, Alberto Nacional, Maximo Oliveros, alleged bet collectors Winifredo Oreta, Rolito Viconia, Emilio Villador, Anna Lea Villanueva and bettor Antonio Bagane.

Supt. Sotero Ramos Jr., chief of the NCRPO's Regional Intelligence Special Operations Office (RISOO) which conducted the operation, said the suspects yielded eight pens, several lists containing jueteng bets, a calculator, and P4,140 in jueteng bets.

The suspects were placed in the custody of the RISOO. Charges of violation of the anti-jueteng law will be filed against them at the Quezon City Prosecutor's Office.

Following the police's "one strike policy" on jueteng, Querol ordered Radovan to relieve Gido.

"I have also warned the Quezon City Police District not to allow the return of jueteng," Querol said.

At least two other cities in Metro Manila are being closely monitored after reports about the resurgence of jueteng in the area reached the police.

Camp Crame officials, meanwhile, hailed the NCRPO for its swift action.

"Like we said, we are done with airing warnings against the failure to stamp out jueteng. Right now, what we'll do is to strike and strike hard," said Chief Supt. Leopoldo Bataoil, PNP spokesperson.

"This action by the NCRPO is very commendable and we expect the same from other regions," he said.

The chief of the Anti-Illegal Gambling Special Task Force said he received reports of jueteng activities in Quezon City a few days ago.

But his men had been busy operating in the countryside, said Chief Supt. Antonio Nanas, the head of the police's anti-jueteng strike force.

"Naunahan kami, mabuti naman (They beat us to it, and that's good)," he said.

The police's one strike policy in jueteng now extends to other similar forms of gambling, such as masiao and suwertes in Mindanao and video karera in Metro Manila.

Jueteng is said to be the source of millions in pesos in payoffs to local and national politicians, as well as junior and senior police officers.

Trader eludes carjackers

By DJ Yap

A BUSINESSMAN ESCAPED BEING LISTED as the latest "carjacking" victim in Quezon City after he sped away in panic from Armalite-wielding car thieves the other night.

Angelito Reyes, 47, was cruising along the Tandang Sora flyover on board his brand new Suzuki Swift at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday when he was stopped by a van and a car, police said.

A blue L-300 van cut him from the right, while a red Toyota Corolla blocked him at the rear, Reyes told Chief Insp. Rudy Jaraza, chief of the anti-carjacking unit of the Quezon City Police District.

A man alighted from the van and trained an Armalite at him, Reyes said. The suspect told him: "Walang personalan. Kotse lang ang kailangan namin. (Nothing personal. We just need the car)."

Gripped by fear, Reyes stepped on the accelerator and sped off, leaving his attackers behind, police said.

But the suspects gave chase, following him for several kilometers. They even opened fire at him at least thrice, Reyes said.

When Reyes turned right to Regalado Street, the suspects, apparently having given up, went the other way.

After Reyes was shown a police file on car thieves, he positively identified a man in a photo as the one who had threatened him.

Jaraza said the man, in his early 30s and heavily-built, belonged to the Madrigal Car-nap Group, but declined to identify him.

Warehouse yields fake toothpaste

By Margaux C. Ortiz

THE NATIONAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (NBI) seized half a million pesos worth of fake toothpaste during a raid on a warehouse in Binondo, Manila, last Monday.

NBI Intellectual Property Rights Division (IPRD) agents confiscated 13,680 boxes of 50 ml tubes of counterfeit Close-Up toothpaste from the warehouse at 286 Clavel St.

"This was the first time we conducted a raid on counterfeit toothpaste," NBI IPRD chief Jose Justo Yap said.

Charges of unfair competition are being readied against warehouse owner Alex Co, he added.

"The counterfeit products were imported from China," Yap told reporters, explaining that even the toothpaste boxes which showed smiling Filipino models were manufactured in China.

Agents of the NBI IPRD also seized P2 million worth of fake perfumes and cosmetics during simultaneous raids in Binondo earlier this month.

The NBI confiscated L'Oréal cosmetic products and 1,970 bottles of counterfeit perfumes with the brand names Giorgio Armani, Lancôme, Guy Laroche, and Ralph Lauren from Meowndes General Merchandise outlets at the New Divisoria and Juan Luna Plaza shopping malls. The owners, Kevin and Sholan Go, are facing charges of trademark infringement and unfair competition.

Table tennis president Valbuena under fire

A BIG GROUP OF TABLE TENNIS COACHES, PLAYERS, club officers and regional directors have asked the Philippine Olympic Committee to oust Table Tennis Association of the Philippines (Tatap) president Victor Valbuena because his reelection was "illegal."

Led by Tatap directors Bax Paras (Region 4), Godofredo Uy (Region 5) and Nico Cawed (Baguio), the group which calls itself the Council for Reforms informed the POC in a petition letter on Thursday that there was no quorum when the Tatap polls was held.

"We're just waiting for his term to end last year, but we're surprised to learn that Valbuena was reelected without informing the recognized clubs and regional directors," said Oscar Santillanes, a former Tatap secretary general and spokesman of the group.

"We just found out that they held an election without a quorum because there were no regional directors and club officers who were present there."

But Valbuena debunked the claims of the unified group, saying he was legally given a fresh mandate by the Tatap regional directors.

Valbuena explained that Santillanes' bone of contention was that he wasn't recognized as Tatap president because former Tatap chief Rufino Go was still the association head in the books submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The group's letter was received by POC special assistant to the president Go Teng Kok on Thursday and the issue is expected to be tackled by the POC arbitration committee next week.

AFTER MISSING THE championship bus for different reasons Wednesday, Red Bull Barako and Purefoods Chunkee go for the clincher anew in their respective semifinal series today in the San Mig Coffee-PBA Fiesta Conference at the Ceresia Astrodome.

Import James Penny returns for the Red Bull Barako when they try to nail down the decisive fourth win against the Barangay Ginebra Kings at 4:40 p.m. in Game 6 of their best-of-seven duel.

The Purefoods Giants, who fumbled away the potential winning basket in the dying seconds of Game 5, also go for the clincher again at 7:35 p.m. against the never-say-die Air21 Express.

"I'm sure, it will be a much tougher game come Friday," said Ginebra coach Siot Tanjungan after the Kings pulled off a 97-83 win over the Barako, with Penny serving a one-game suspension as a result of two technical fouls in Game 5.

Red Bull had earlier won three straight after dropping the opener of the series in overtime.

Ginebra import Chris Porter will have to work even harder after turning in 27 points and 26 rebounds in Game 5, while Eric Menk and Rommel Adducul have to fight their way into the paint with Penny around.

"We'll try to take away their post offense and let them hit from the outside if they can," said Red Bull coach Yeng Guiao.

"You have to take a risk by either guarding the post and allowing the threes, or create more space for them by extending out—which could make you vulnerable to their big men."

Swim-or-sink match

The Express, on the other hand, will be playing their fourth swim-or-sink match of the conference after booting out San Miguel Beer and Talk 'N Text and avoiding elimination Wednesday night.

"This team rides on emotion and energy," said Air21 coach Bo Perasol. "It's always an advantage for us whenever our backs are against the wall."

But the Express are still around this time mainly because of luck.

After moving within a point at 100-99, the Giants had the potential game-winner in their hands in Game 5. But Roger Yap, who was free under the Purefoods basket, threw it away by fumbling a pass from Kerby Raymundo in the dying seconds of play.

Taekwondo head blames test center for drug shame

By Musong R. Castillo

PHILIPPINE TAEKWONDO ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT Robert Aventajado yesterday branded as "useless" the drug-testing procedure of the Philippine Center for Sports Medicine and blamed the agency for Esther Marie Singson's fumbling the World Anti-Doping Agency (Wada) test recently.

Aventajado said that while Singson passed a PCSM test on Nov. 22, the Wada-accredited clinic in Beijing, China, later found the taekwondo gold medalist of the 23rd Southeast Asian Games to be positive for diuretics.

The substance is banned by the Wada because it can shield steroid or performance-enhancing drugs.

But PCSM head Dr. Raul Canlas said that the system has been in place for the past seven editions of the SEAG and that no untoward incident had ever happened on Filipino athletes.

"The PCSM held a series of seminars for national coaches six months before the Games," Canlas told the biquinor over the phone. "Those seminars were intended to warn them (athletes), and she (Singson) was warned [about taking banned drugs]. I have her coach's word."

Canlas declined to identify Singson's coach, one of many who attended the seminar. He said he had urged the mentors to tell their players not to "take anything unusual."

Singson, who insists she had made an "honest mistake," would lose her gold medal in taekwondo if the SEAG Federation refused to accept her alibi.

The banned substance was found in a weight-reducing tea that Singson took last October so she would make the weight for the bantamweight category.

Meanwhile, Esdi Rupol, the conditioning and strengthening coach of the national taekwondo team, said that

Singson did not tell anyone she took a brand of herbal slimming tea that is rich in diuretics.

The entire taekwondo team was quartered at the Ultra from Nov. 7 last year and Rupol's wife, Christina—a health adviser, but not a full-time employee of the PDA—took care of the team's nutrition requirements.

In a related development, PDA vice-president Sung

Chong Hong will fly to South Korea soon to attend the World Taekwondo Federation meeting and at the same time raise the case of Singson before the executive board, of which he is a member.

Drug cases in the WTF can mean suspensions, and Singson's case could merit a two-year ban from local and international competitions.

Pro-Am open to Asian Tour bets

JUVIC PAGUNSAN AND THE FOUR OTHER Filipino pros who made it to this year's Asian Tour may still join the 5th Konica Minolta National Pro-Am on Feb. 7-11 at Riviera's Linger.

Pagunsan, who qualified for this year's Asian Tour after a distinguished stint as an amateur, has been a participant in the annual event since 2001 with his father, Juanito, as the pro.

This year, however, Juvic has to team up with an amateur with an index handicap of 5 or higher in the Feb. 8-11 tournament.

Angelo Que, Gerald Rosales, Frankie Mijozza and Jerome Delaraine also made it to this year's Asian Tour. Like Pagunsan, they may tap amateurs with indices of 5 or higher as partners in the event presented by U-Bix Corp. chair Bert Bravo which stakes a record pot of P1.7 million and two Toyota Innovas as hole-in-one prizes.

Mijozza is expected to miss today's deadline, however, since he is listed among the entries in the Johnnie Walker Classic in Australia set Feb. 9-12.

"Everybody is welcome, for as long as everybody complies with the rules of the tournament," said Bravo, who co-chairs the executive committee with Benny Gopez, the president of the National Golf Association of the Philippines.

Gerard Cantada and JR Tanpinco are gunning for a historic third straight victory.

Milo Marathon Tagbilaran leg fires off Sunday

MORE THAN 4,000 RUNNERS ARE EXPECTED at the starting line when Tagbilaran City holds the 21K elimination leg of the National Milo Marathon for the first time on Sunday.

The 30th year of the country's biggest and longest-running foot race is staging what is actually the second leg of the qualifying series in its maiden visit to the picturesque island of Bohol.

Slots in the grand finals to be held in Metro Manila on Dec. 10, plus the lion's share of the cash pot of P144,600 await the top three finishers in the 21K men's and women's races.

Organizers said prizes will also be given out to the top 10 finishers in the 5K fun run and the Kid-dies 3K age-group race of the weekly event held in partnership with Cebu Pacific, Bayview Park Hotel-Manila, Adidas and Powerbar.

Bohol Gov. Erico Aumentado will fire the starting gun for the 21K event, while Tagbilaran Mayor Dan Lim and Vice Gov. Julius Caesar Herrera will send off the runners in the 5K and 3K races.

National sports commissioner Ambrosio de Luna will help award the prizes.

Milo jackets, caps, basketballs, a cell phone and P15,000 cash will be raffled off on race day.

Local organizers Dionisio Baite, a member of the Bohol provincial board, and Joel Rosario are advising all participants to be at the starting area before 5 a.m. on Sunday for the final briefing.

The kick-off leg in Kidapawan City last Sunday drew 4,465 runners, and Milo Sports Events executive Pat Goc-Ong said they are targeting about 182,000 participants in this season's 30 legs, including the 42K grand finale.

Roberto, Korean pace Southern Ladies

ROBERTO: Equivalent to 4-under 68

LORA ROBERTO AND KOREAN CRYSTAL Chin fired 4-under par 68s yesterday for 58 points under the Molave scoring system to share the lead at the start of the 43rd Southern Ladies Open in Manila Portich, Bukidnon.

Roberto, spearhead of the Manila Southwoods squad, flashed solid putting form at the Del Monte Golf Club here, sinking five birdies inside eight feet to cushion a bogey on the par-3 No. 7.

"It will be a question of putting since the surface is difficult," said Roberto, eyeing a second crown in three years after ruling the Bacolod edition of this annual event in 2004. "The greens are wide but very tricky."

Roberto and Shin took a one-point lead over another Korean, Park Sung-hyun, in the 54-hole event sponsored by Petron Corp., DHL Worldwide Express/WWW Express, Gopez Corp. and Hans Bruhmann Int'l Jeweller.

The two Koreans exploited their familiarity of the course, having stayed here for months, in a bid to dominate the event.

Aileen Rose Yao, one of the veteran campaigners here, shot 55 points for solo fourth.

Teener Mia Piccio came through with 54 points like Lovelyn Guioquio to lead the charge of the youth brigade while Crystal Supernal, another juggler, and Chihoro Itoaka fired 53 points apiece under the scoring system that gives 4 points for a birdie, 3 for par, 2 for bogey and 1 point for a double-bogey.

Eva Miñola had 51 points while 2003 champion Lina de Guzman made 50 like Jyrra Mae Wong, Cyna Rodriguez, Anya Tampico and Carmelita Villaroman.

Claudine Garcia shot 46 points for a 4-point lead in Class A over Nene Guioquio; Mina Gilott and Inday Tan scored 32 points each to share the Class B lead; Joyce Duque and Bernadette Jalosjos each fired 34 points to show the way in Class C; while Ervina Wilkenson led Class D with 26 points.

S'woods PAL Interclub top pick

DAVAO CITY—MANILA SOUTHWOODS and Luisita are the teams to watch when the Philippine Airlines Interclub golf tournament fires off in three tough courses here later this month.

Defending champion Manila Southwoods is favored to win its second straight men's championship in the 59th Interclub battles set Feb. 22-25 at the Apo Golf and Country Club and the Pinos Verdes Golf and Country Club.

The tournament, considered as the country's national clubs championship, actually begins Feb. 17 with the staging of the 19th Seniors Interclub competitions at the Lanang Golf and Country Club, and at Apo.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

DEPARTMENT CIRCULAR NO. DC2006-01-0002

ON THE MANDATE AND RESPONSIBILITY OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY OVER THE WHOLESALE ELECTRICITY SPOT MARKET AND THE AUTHORITY OF THE PHILIPPINE ELECTRICITY MARKET CORPORATION IN RELATION TO THE PREPARATION, ADOPTION AND FILING FOR APPROVAL OF THE PRICE DETERMINATION METHODOLOGY

WHEREAS, under Section 30 of Republic Act No. 9136 (otherwise known as the "Electric Power Industry Reform Act of 2001" or "EPIRA"), the Department of Energy ("DOE") is mandated to establish the wholesale electricity spot market ("WESM") composed of the wholesale electricity spot market participants;

WHEREAS, in accordance with Rule 9 Section 3(a) of the Implementing Rules and Regulations of the EPIRA ("IRRA"), the DOE is mandated to organize and establish the appropriate market design and governance structure of the wholesale electricity spot market;

WHEREAS, pursuant to its power to establish the WESM, Section 30 of EPIRA further provides that the DOE is responsible for (a) the formulation of the detailed rules for the WESM ("WESM Rules"), jointly with the electric power industry participants and (b) the constitution of the market operator which shall be an autonomous group responsible for the implementation of the WESM in accordance with the WESM Rules;

WHEREAS, on 28 June 2002, the DOE, with the joint endorsement of electric power industry participants, issued Department Circular No. 2002-06-003 promulgating the WESM Rules, consistent with the provisions of Section 30 of EPIRA that:

- the rules shall reflect accepted economic principles and provide a level playing field to all electric power industry participants; and
- the rules shall provide, among others, procedures for:
 - establishing the merit order dispatch instructions for each time period;
 - determining the market-clearing price for each time period;
 - administering the market, including criteria for admission to and termination from the market which includes security or performance bond requirements, voting rights of the participants, surveillance and assurance of compliance of the participants with the rules and the formation of the wholesale electricity spot market governing body;
 - prescribing guidelines for the market operation in system emergencies; and
 - amending the rules;

WHEREAS, in November 2003, the DOE constituted the Autonomous Group Market Operator ("AGMO") with the incorporation of the Philippine Electricity Market Corporation ("PEMC")

WHEREAS, Section 30 of EPIRA states that the WESM Rules shall provide the mechanism for determining the price of electricity not covered by bilateral contracts between sellers and purchasers of electricity;

WHEREAS, Section 30 of EPIRA provides further that the price determination methodology contained in the WESM Rules shall be subject to the approval of the Energy Regulatory Commission ("ERC")

WHEREAS, on 30 November 2004, the DOE authorized the PEMC to file on its behalf the WESM Price Determination Methodology ("PDM") for the approval of the ERC, and to comply with all directives of the ERC in relation to the PDM.

WHEREAS, there is a need to clarify the scope of PEMC's authority to act on behalf of the DOE in relation to the preparation, adoption and filing for approval of the PDM with the ERC pursuant to the DOE's mandate as regards the design and structure of the WESM.

NOW, THEREFORE, premises considered, the DOE hereby adopts this Circular for purposes stated above and to provide guidance to PEMC in seeking the approval of the PDM:

Section 1. Objective of Wholesale Electricity Spot Market. Consistent with its mandate under Section 30 of EPIRA and, more particularly Rule 9, Section 3(a) of the IRRA, the DOE adopted a WESM design and structure that is intended to establish a competitive, efficient, transparent and reliable market for electricity where:

- A level playing field exists among the participants;
- Trading of electricity is facilitated among participants within the spot market;
- Third parties are granted non-discriminatory access to the power system;
- Prices are governed as far as practicable by commercial and market forces; and
- Efficiency is encouraged.

Section 2. Components of Wholesale Electricity Spot Market. The following key components constitute the design of the WESM:

(a) Pricing

- Basic to any market design is the method and procedures for determining the price at which electricity will be sold or purchased in the wholesale electricity spot market.
- The main objectives of the pricing method are to:
 - Balance supply and demand;
 - Provide the proper incentives, both short term and long term, to the buyers and sellers through the correct pricing signals;
 - Prevent abuse of market power; and
 - Manage congestion.

(b) Scheduling and Dispatch

- This involves the process of determining the dispatch schedule for all facilities, which schedule shall be used by the system operator in providing central dispatch to all generation facilities and loads connected to the transmission system.
- It is based on certain specified factors, such as pricing (economic dispatch) and transmission capacity and constraints (security-constrained dispatch).
- In order to implement the dispatch schedule, there must be coordination between market operations and system operations. The market design establishes the procedures, processes or systems necessary to enable the market operator and system operator to coordinate their functions in relation to the spot market.
- The need for coordination is emphasized by the fact that the centralized operation and maintenance of the transmission system and the grid in the restructured electricity industry is controlled by a single entity (initially the TRANSCO, eventually the private concessionaire selected in accordance with Republic Act No. 9136).

(c) Billing and Settlement

The market design should specify the procedures for determining the final settlement amounts to be paid by the market participants for their transactions in the wholesale electricity spot market and the procedures for billing and actual settlement of market transactions between the market operator and the market participants, as well as among market participants.

(d) Market Administration/Governance

- The governance of the market contemplates the processes by which decisions are made and implemented within the wholesale electricity spot market to ensure the attainment of the market's objectives.
- This shall include, but not be limited to, the following:
 - The terms and conditions by which entities may be authorized to participate in the spot market;
 - A cost-effective framework for the resolution of disputes among market participants;
 - Sanctions in case of a breach or violation of the market rules by a market participant; and
 - Ethical, transparent and fair processes for amending the market rules.

Section 3. PEMC Submission of Price Determination Methodology. The PEMC is authorized to submit to the ERC, for evaluation and approval, the PDM which consists of the procedures for the determination of schedules and energy prices for the real time dispatch and for the week-ahead and day-ahead market projections. These procedures shall be expressed in a series of equations or mathematical algorithm that constitute the Market Dispatch Optimization Model (the "MDOM").

The MDOM shall contain and adhere to the market design features and principles contained in the WESM Rules, particularly those contained in WESM Rules 3.2 to 3.10, as follows:—

- WESM Rule 3.2 – Market Network Model, Trading Nodes and Pricing Zones;
- WESM Rule 3.3 – Ancillary Services;
- WESM Rule 3.4 – Market Trading Interval and Timetable;
- WESM Rule 3.5 – Submission of Offers, Bids and Data;
- WESM Rule 3.6 – Market Dispatch Optimization Model;
- WESM Rule 3.7 – Market Projections;
- WESM Rule 3.8 – Scheduling and Dispatch Implementation;
- WESM Rule 3.9 – Treatment of Load Shedding and Excess Generation; and
- WESM Rule 3.10 – Determination of Market Prices.

Except for the MDOM, all the other components or elements of the WESM as described in Section 2 hereof are considered integral parts of the design and structure of the market and, thus, PEMC shall ensure that no changes are made to these components or elements without the prior approval of the DOE or as may be necessary pursuant to any amendments to the WESM Rules. However, PEMC is authorized to provide information or to expound on any issue or question from the public, the ERC or any other governmental agency as regards the non-PDM components of market design.

Section 4. DOE Responsibility. Notwithstanding the authority granted to PEMC under Section 3 above, the DOE shall retain overall responsibility for ensuring that the market design and structure, as embodied in the WESM Rules, shall achieve the objectives of the wholesale electricity spot market stated in Section 1 hereof.

Section 5. No amendment or repeal of existing laws. Nothing in this Department Circular shall be construed to amend, supplant, or repeal any existing law, rule or contract. However, to the extent necessary, previous issuances by this Department in relation to the subject matter herein shall be deemed amended accordingly.

This Department Circular shall take effect immediately after its publication in two (2) newspapers of general circulation and shall remain in effect until otherwise revoked.

James does it all as Cavs rip Nets

NEW YORK—LEBRON JAMES RECORDED HIS THIRD TRIPLE-DOUBLE of the season and seventh of his career to inspire the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 91-85 victory over the New Jersey Nets on Wednesday, extending their winning streak to seven games.

James bagged 26 points, pulled down 11 rebounds and dished out 10 assists in front of the home fans to claim their first win over the Nets in six meetings. Drew Gooden contributed 18 points and six rebounds to the Cleveland cause while Sasha Pavlovic had 14 points.

Vince Carter bagged a game-high 29 points for New Jersey. Richard Jefferson added 19 and Jason Kidd 14 but the Nets could not follow up their impressive win over league-leading Detroit on Tuesday, absorbing their fifth loss in six games.

The two teams headed into the final 12 minutes deadlocked at 62-62.

In Indianapolis, Peja Stojakovic scored 26 points and grabbed 13 rebounds on his home debut in leading the Indiana Pacers to a 105-79 rout of the Los Angeles Lakers.

In Auburn Hills, Richard Hamilton bagged 21 points and Tayshaun Prince added 20 as the Detroit Pistons routed the Minnesota Timberwolves, 90-74.

Meanwhile, Australian forward Andrew Bogut of Milwaukee and Dwight Howard of Orlando led a list of 19 players selected for the Rookie Challenge in Houston as part of the NBA All-Star weekend on Feb. 17. Bogut was the No. 1 draft choice in 2005 and Howard had that honor in 2004.

SOLAR Sports will air the Cleveland-Miami game at 9 a.m. with a replay at 8 p.m.

Officiating, 'suspension' rule hit

FOR THE BETTER PART OF THE 2005-2006 season, fans of the Philippine Basketball Association have started coming back to watch the ongoing San Mig Coffee-PBA Fiesta Conference, a good sign for the beleaguered play-for-pay league which has been suffering from dwindling attendance the last two years.

But I'm worried that this newfound upsurge in attendance would deteriorate for two reasons: One, the mounting complaints against sloppy officiating and two, the new rule on automatic suspension on a player following his ejection on two technical fouls.

On the matter of sloppy officiating, PBA commissioner Noli Eala should not only flex his muscle by directing the referees to be always spotlessly clean and honest. He should also punish those who commit clear mistakes in this crucial stage of the semifinal series so that the public won't suspect that these whistle-blowers are under the influence of unscrupulous people.

Regarding the automatic suspension slapped on a player ejected on two technical fouls, many say, and I agree, that this rule is ambiguous and could be interpreted and/or understood in two or more ways.

As Red Bull coach Yeng Guiao said (on the one-game suspension of import James Penny on two technicals), "The first technical foul was uncalled for. He (Penny) was only going to block a shot by (Mark) Caguioa. It was a legitimate intent to block a shot and there was no intent to hurt." On the second technical foul, Guiao said, "We reviewed the tape and it showed that Penny just extended his foot on the side of Caguioa. Again, there was no malicious attempt to hurt."

Playing without Penny in Game 5 last Wednesday, Red Bull lost to Ginebra. In my view, last Wednesday's outcome was proof enough that a team sans an import would be greatly disadvantaged, not to mention the fact that the game became less exciting and the result more predictable.

However, Eala said that based on existing PBA rules, the ejection merits an automatic one-game suspension. "I don't see a compelling reason to disturb the rules."

According to basketball diehards, the decision to impose a one-game suspension on Penny was grossly unfair and too harsh. They stressed that

CLEAN LIVING

Manolo R. Inigo

Penny did not even deliver a single blow at anybody, not a single player (from both Red Bull and Ginebra) was hurt; and there was not even a melee. If some people got pissed off about that, then they have a problem. "They need to look in the mirror," they said.

As a longtime PBA fan, I can say that among the imports who have strutted their savvy here, Penny and Shawn Daniels (of Air21) are the most behaved, hard-working and level-headed players compared with others who played in the PBA in the past. They are a breed apart from those rude, arrogant and ill-tempered imports who played here for the big money and enjoyed the hospitality of the Filipinos. The PBA is lucky to have the likes of Penny displaying his playing skills here.

Now on its 30th year, the PBA has had its up-and-down seasons. Once the country's most popular and profitable sports organization, it fell on hard times in 2003 and 2004. Gone are the good old days when the much respected Leo Prieto, brilliant lawyer Rudy Salud and my kabayan, Jun Bernardino, steered the pro league to unprecedented success.

I am not saying that Eala has been ineffective as the PBA commissioner since he replaced Bernardino in 2003, but he needs to prove himself by showing to the public, the team owners and the players as well that he is fair and just; that there is equal treatment and no discrimination in the PBA, especially now that the teams are playing with much intensity because the results carry much weight.

In fact, the competition among the teams never stops—the teams are already busy preparing for the next conference by trading and getting new players. TNT reportedly is letting go of its main players, including Willie Miller, but not As Taulava and Jimmy Alapag, while Alaska is sending feelers to acquire Red Bull's Lordy Tugade in exchange for Rich Alvarez, a former Ateneo teammate and bosom buddy of Barako marquee player Rico Villanueva.

Tiger back on the prowl in Dubai

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES—Tiger Woods put his clubs away, forgot about golf as best he could and concentrated on his vacation.

He's ready to get back to work.

Woods won the Buick Invitational in a playoff Sunday in San Diego, his first tournament of the season after a six-week break—the longest of his career. Now, after a 20-hour flight to the Persian Gulf, he'll make a third attempt at winning the Dubai Desert Classic, which begins play Thursday.

He reportedly is being paid about $3 million to play in one of the flagship events of the PGA European Tour. The entire purse for the event is $2.4 million.

The Emirates Golf Course is a palm-lined oasis in the middle of Dubai, a booming city of 1.5 million. In 2001, Woods lost on the 72nd hole to Thomas Bjorn. In 2004, he finished five strokes behind winner and Florida neighbor Mark O'Meara.

During his break, Woods went more than three weeks without touching a club. He stayed home, spent time with his wife, Elin, and went skunking with O'Meara and his family.

Face to face with Jennifer Aniston

'It has been a tough year but I wouldn't change a thing'

LOS ANGELES—JENNIFER ANISTON is one tough cookie.

The first time we met her a few years ago, Jen was still married to Brad Pitt and very much in love. She came across as a down-to-earth, no-nonsense girl you could hang out and be friends with. She wasn't feeling well at the time (she was nursing a flu) but she exuded warmth, sincerity and a thoroughly wholesome personality.

Today, Jennifer, 36, is in the thick of a media spree that involves her now ex-hubby Brad and a pregnant Angelina Jolie. After several months of keeping their relationship low key, Brad, 42, and Angelina, 30, finally announced they were expecting their first child. The whole world was shocked—including Jennifer.

Jen was reportedly alone in her Hollywood house when news that the Brangelina baby was due in May broke. For those who are doing their math, Angelina was pregnant before the divorce of Brad and Jen was finalized last October. In a Vanity Fair interview, Jennifer admitted that she wanted to start her own family, going as far as to declare, "There's a man wandering the streets right now who's [going to be] the father of my children."

Could it be her new beau, actor Vince Vaughn, from whom she says she is getting moral support?

Ironically, Jennifer just did a movie, "Derailed," where she portrays "the other woman."

This time around, we met Jennifer at The Ritz Carlton Huntington Hotel and Spa. She arrived in a striking black pinstriped pantsuit, blonde hair cascading down her shoulders. She was calm, cool, relaxed and smiling—this was one month before the announcement of the Brangelina baby.

In "Derailed," the lead characters are cheating on their spouses. How important is fidelity in a marriage? Or should it be accepted as just being "modern" to have an open marriage?

Well (laughter), I am not personally up for swinging but I think, you know, to each his own. There are people who have open marriages and they think that is okay. I personally am not interested in that. I think fidelity is important in a marriage.

Are there other things just as important? Trust, honesty and friendship.

You have a line in the movie that goes, "You can't appreciate someone until they are gone." Are there people in your life you did not appreciate?

Sure. I would say that as a kid, you do not always appreciate maybe your elders all the time, like your grandmother. I wish I'd spent more time with my grandmother when I was a kid... and it wasn't that I didn't appreciate her, I was just... a kid. But I loved her. She was one of the strongest women I have ever known. Like, we had a fun relationship when we were together but I did not make that extra effort, you know.

What made you accept this role?
I was hesitant at first but I always wanted to do a thriller. I love a good thriller.

Face to face . . .

Did you like your character?

I like [the fact] that she was flawed. I think she was trapped in a situation that she really could not get out of.

Why do you think somebody like Clive's character would be attracted to your character and leave a beautiful wife?

I don't know. I think that's just life. I think that is what is sort of harsh about it. Life is not easy. Life does not make sense sometimes. You can have everything wonderful in the world and you just make stupid choices, you know, because you are bored for a moment or you are not fulfilled for a moment.

Your character obviously has a very dark side—did you see that?

Not really. I mean, I do not look at it as a dark side. Or, I do not think she looks at herself as a dark person, you know. It's like... a villain does not think he is villainous.

Lately, you have been on the cover of most magazines. How has the past year been to you?

It has been the best of times and the worst of times. It has been a tough year but I wouldn't change a thing. I wouldn't trade it for anything.

How do you feel that everyone thinks of you as his or her best friend?

It is nice that everyone thinks that they know me even if they do not. People have been very supportive. I think that is very nice.

Do you always date just actors?

No, it can be anybody as long as he is not crazy. He does not have to be famous. I would go out with a normal guy.

How do you relax?

I do yoga two or three times a week. It keeps my body strong and makes me feel, eat and function better. I try to relax also by being with my friends. I am very easy going. I like to be in my home. I like to watch movies or just get in the car and go on a road trip.

Any regrets from the past year?

I did not have to do anything I did not want to do this past year. It was all good. I did not have to put on an act. My friends made me laugh. I made myself laugh. I have a very small group of friends and I usually speak to three or four for advice. I collect the data and then figure out what to do.

How do you make decisions?

I follow my heart, follow my instincts. Every time I strayed from my instincts, I went down a bad road.

What makes you happy?

A sunset makes me happy, a bottle of wine and nice cheese. And, of course, love makes me happy. Simple things make me happy.

What are your hopes for 2006?

To be happy. To follow my heart, to follow my instincts. To continue to figure things out, find a place, have great friends and have a family of my own.

Do you still believe in marriage?

Sure, why not.

DID YOU KNOW...

When you're not doing a concert, how do you celebrate Valentine's Day?

Rachel: I have never experienced not having a concert on Valentine's Day. This year will be the first time, it'll be something new.

Geneva: My man [KC Montero] takes me out to dinner.

Vina: If I'm not seeing anyone, I spend it with friends. If I have a special someone, then I spend it with him.

What's the most romantic Valentine's Day you ever experienced?

Rachel: After a concert at the Shangri-La Hotel, I went back to my room and found rose petals all over the floor—my boyfriend's doing. He had also gotten me a cute stuffed toy and ordered champagne.

Geneva: When KC got us a hotel suite and filled it with flowers and candles.

Vina: I haven't really experienced one. Hopefully, soon.

What's your dream Valentine's date?

CLOCKWISE, from top: Vina, Geneva and Rachel

Rachel: A picnic on the beach at sunset, having wine and cheese.

Geneva: Candlelit dinner on the beach with Italian food. A bottle of Pinot or Merlot would be nice.

Vina: On the beach, candlelit dinner, sunset, romantic music.

Rachel and Vina: Brad Pitt

Geneva: Brad Pitt and Chad Michael Murray

What's the most romantic love song?

Rachel: "It Might Be You."

Geneva: "Back at One" by Brian McKnight.

Vina: "Nobody Does It Better" and "Love Me for What I Am."

If you were not doing a show, who would you watch this year?

Rachel: Brian McKnight or Maxwell.

Geneva: I'd try to see all.

Vina: Secret. Hahaha!

Why should we watch your show? What can the audience expect?

Rachel: It's not your typical Valentine's show. Since there'll be a lot of dancing, it'll be a high-energy show. It'll also be funny and informative for girls and guys alike.

Geneva: We [three] are great friends. We have a certain chemistry that other performers may not have. We have so much fun together—that's what the audience will see.

Vina: Lots of dancing and singing, plus it's our first time to perform together.

They rock, we roll

By Oliver M. Pulumbait

JOAQUIN PHOENIX AND REESE WITHERSPOON deliver distinguished portrayals of beloved music legends Johnny Cash and June Carter Cash in "Walk the Line." Phoenix sears as Cash, while Witherspoon sparkles as the painfully loyal Carter. Their rapport brings to life a romance once forbidden, since the pioneering musicians already had their own respective families when they first met.

Phoenix and Witherspoon's milestone roles also required them to sing using their own voices—upon director James Mangold and

"Walk the Line" is a complicated fairy tale that makes us tap our feet and smile

REVIEW

Cash's insistence. "Walk the Line" skillfully discusses Cash's childhood trauma and eventual self-destructive bouts with drug addiction, and his early, off-turbulent relationship. It also depicts the musician's importance in pop cultural revolution—Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis are among his peers—and how different the musical landscape was back in 1950s America.

LEAD actors Joaquin Phoenix and Reese Witherspoon

It's easy to understand how these two future icons set out to conquer their brave new world. But sadly, in Cash's case, that world repeatedly conquered him. In this complicated fairy tale, however, the reserved damsel saves the fallen, booze- and pill-addicted knight. One really can't help but be touched.

Based on Cash's two autobiographies, "Walk the Line" underscores the very human side of superstar dom, and the ever-reliable dramatic wellspring of humble beginnings. There is a timelessness to it that today's entertainment scene denizens might relate to, and even learn from. We also feel a crucial honesty in the narrative through Cash's pervading lyrics and viscerally appealing music, which spoke, and still speaks, to diverse listeners.

The songs help tell stories within the bigger story, as well. In gripping song numbers, the actors channel the performing personas of those they portray, manifesting sensuality, liberation and heartbreak that make us smile, tap our feet, or choke up. Simply put: They rock, and... well, we roll.

ACTORS RICHARD GUTIERREZ and Angel Locsin will be speaking in Bahasa Indonesia when the Philippines' hit fantasy "Mulawin" from GMA 7 premieres on an Indonesian channel in March, according to a GMA Network executive.

"Mulawin," the TV series that launched the love team of Richard (Aguluz) and Angel (Alwina) in 2004, would be dubbed in Bahasa, the dominant language, and aired on TV 7 or P. Duta Visual Nusantara Tivi Tumbuh, said Darlene Dimaano, assistant vice president for syndication.

"This is a breakthrough. We've wanted to penetrate the Indonesian market for two years now," Dimaano told Inquirer Entertainment in a phone interview on Tuesday. "The program was edited to fit 82 episodes, one hour each. No time slot has been picked."

GMA 7's executive vice president and chief operating officer Jimmy Duavit and TV 7 president Lanny Rasmussen inked the deal in June 2005, about the same time GMA 7 and Cambodia's Channel 9 (Television Network) linked up for the same TV show, Dimaano noted.

"The program was dubbed in Khmer and aired in Cambodia last September," she said. "We're working on syndicating other programs like 'Encantadia,' but nothing has been finalized so far."

Meanwhile, Tony Matoto, who represented Vic del Rosario on a trade mission to India last month said he is hopeful that the trip

"sent a strong signal that we are serious in our intention to work with India."

Former President Fidel V. Ramos led a 25-member team that visited the subcontinent from Jan. 15 to 21 to attend "Partnership Summit 2006" in Calcutta.

Del Rosario is also the executive producer of Viva Entertainment Inc. Matoto is Del Rosario's chief of staff and head of Viva Entertainment's film archiving department.

In an earlier interview, Del Rosario pointed out that there is a big Indian market for Pinoy films and TV shows.

"We may be able to generate demand for Filipino films there if we promote them properly. We are targeting the Mumbai market, which is used to watching foreign movies," said Matoto. "We are also looking into the possibility of co-producing Indian films there and/or Filipino movies here."

Mumbai, Matoto added, is the center of Bollywood, the world's largest film industry, which produces twice the annual film output of Hollywood in the United States.

Matoto added: "The companies we spoke with asked us to send screeners (films recorded in VCDs and DVDs). They want to find out if they can market our products there."

At the Calcutta summit, Matoto said Ramos "introduced Pinoy films as Jollywood."

"With our movies introduced as Jollywood, we are hoping to have our own branding, our own identity. When you hear Jollywood, you'd know it's from the Philippines," he explained.

Matoto clarified: "While acknowledging that Jollywood is not of the same level with Bollywood and Hollywood in terms of output, it aspires to be within the top 10 films in the world. Ramos emphasized quality not quantity in films."

'Show me the monkey!'

LOS ANGELES—"SHOW ME the monkey! Show me the monkey!"

When we heard the photographers screaming thus to the winners backstage at last Sunday evening's Screen Actors Guild (SAG) Awards, we wondered if they were asking a particular actor or actress to expose a body part.

It turned out that the photos simply wanted Reese Witherspoon or Kiefer Sutherland to prominently show off their green-black SAG trophies.

As normally happens in these events (SAG night was the latest event in Hollywood's ongoing awards season), the photographers and reporters were split into two groups. After thanking their divorce lawyers (S. Epatha Merkerson did) and agents (most actors did), winners were whisked first to the paparazzi room and then to the reporters' room.

We knew when a big star was being photographed next room because the paparazzi, never known for being shy, shouted at the top of their lungs to catch the winner's attention, make him or her stop and pose. The sound of this pandemonium reminded us of a boxing match.

In the press room, a different kind of madness ensued. Whenever reporters from all branches of media—print, radio, TV, online—are thrown together, expect the questions to range from the sublime to the downright silly.

ONLY IN HOLLYWOOD

Ruben V. Nepales

"I can't believe you just asked that!" exclaimed Sandra Bullock to one reporter. We had been admiring Sandra for staying in the sidelines (she was not even on the stage for winners to stand on while being asked questions), letting her "Crash" co-stars bask in the limelight for their Best Ensemble (Film) win, when a writer asked her to step out, front and center, and answer this query: "What are you going for? Who are you wearing?"

GEORGE Clooney

Amid laughter, Sandra smilingly retorted, "What was I going for? What were you going for? What were you thinking when you put that on? I don't know how to answer that."

For the record, Sandra looked lovely in a pastel-hued off-shoulder dress. Earlier in the red carpet parade, we thought Brenda Strong of "Desperate Housewives," tall and regal, stood out. George Clooney clowning around and was his usual friendly self, talking to almost everyone. Walking behind pregnant actress Mariska Hargitay, George amusingly said out loud to the photographers, "I didn't do that!" and made matching gestures. Everybody cracked up. When Mariska turned around and saw what he was doing, he immediately engaged her in a conversation.

Even 77-year-old Shirley Temple Black, the night's Lifetime Achievement awardee, announced, "The handsomest guy in the room is (George) Clooney. I haven't talked to him yet. I will later."

George may have lost to Paul Giamatti as Best Supporting Actor but the latter said of the "Syriana" actor: "He's good-looking and a good actor." Paul himself is one of the finest actors today but appearance-wise, he was characteristically dressed rather casually—no tie, several buttons open, a few pimples on his face.

Typically, the self-effacing actor did not take too seriously a reporter's question on how he planned his career path. "Was I on a path?" he deadpanned. "I thought I was just lost in the woods."

About bling

Back to the red carpet, an interesting sight was a gaggle of limo drivers, who, having dropped off their famous passengers, were trying to spot the celebrities through the media throng and a fence. "Is that Kofi Annan?" they asked aloud, mistaking a gray-haired black man doing the red carpet media line for the UN Secretary General. The question showed that these chauffeurs spend a lot of time on the road listening to "real" news on the limo radio, and not merely vegetating in front of the TV watching the E! channel.

While all this was going on, a colleague of mine who was going live on Australian TV half-seriously fretted about the $40,000 diamond earrings she was wearing, lent to her by Chopard. "I feel as if I need a bodyguard," she quipped as she tugged at her jewelry to make sure they were still there.

S. EPATHA Merkerson

Speaking of bling, Merkerson, Best Actress in a TV Movie or Miniseries (for HBO's "Lackawanna Blues"), was also the winner in the Most Blinding Bling Department. The actress was dressed down in a black blouse and pants but her ring, bracelet, necklace and earrings sure sparkled. The dazzle from her diamond-studded ring alone almost made us reach for our sunglasses.

It was déjà vu for us when Dominic Monaghan walked into the press room with his "Lost" cast mates. The other year, Dominic appeared on the same spot as part of the winning "Lord of the Rings" ensemble. So we asked Dominic what it was like being a winner this time around. "It's just work," he answered. "You go from one project to another. It's great to just be working. Nothing is more significant than another. They are stepping stones."

Dominic's co-star, Michelle Rodriguez, made the press laugh when she answered a fashion question with, "I'm wearing Diane Von Furstenberg. Did I say that right? She's been in the business since the '60s, and I love old people."

Other memorable backstage moments

Sean Hayes showed why he deserved to win Best Actor in a TV Comedy Series ("Will & Grace"). As he was being introduced to the press, Sean pretended to be a hopeful nominee all over again. He crossed his fingers in mock suspense and when he heard his name, he reacted jubilantly and rushed to the mike.

Instant rapport

Also an exuberant winner was Mehcad Brooks, a member of the "Desperate Housewives" cast which was adjudged Best Ensemble (TV Comedy Series). Mehcad revealed that, only five years ago, he was enrolled at the nearby University of Southern California and sat as one of the fans in the bleachers stand. With that admission, he jumped down to be with his press audience and yelled into a mike held by a reporter.

Mehcad's co-star, Felicity Huffman, Best Actress in a TV Comedy Series, also had a way of creating instant rapport with the cooped up journalists. Entering the room, her first words were, "You need a drink, right? Why can't we arrange that?"

When we interviewed her less than a year ago, Felicity told a fashion reporter in our group that the earrings she wore that day was something she just bought at Sears. But this evening, Felicity was quite a vision in her violet gown and 18-karat gold chandelier earrings. "I'm (now) a fashionista!" she quipped, her tone dripping with irony.

Felicity insisted that her recent successes had not changed her. "It happened to me so late," said the most down-to-earth among the desperados. "I'm such an old broad. You get a deep sense of gratitude in your bones."

As the rites ended, Matt Dillon suddenly thrust his statuette (which he received as a member of the "Crash" ensemble) into our hands. The thing sure felt heavy—12 pounds of solid bronze. No wonder the pregnant Rachel Weisz had to put her Best Supporting Actress trophy down before she answered the reporters' questions.

"Oscars... Oscars," we whispered to Matt, predicting that he would also be nominated by the Academy for Best Supporting Actor, following his nominations in the same category tonight and at the Globes (also for "Crash"). He simply smiled.

Matt remembered that we missed seeing his new movie in Sundance so he asked us, "Have you seen Tropicum?" The man was already campaigning for awards season 2007!

Two days later, Matt did score an Oscar nomination.

P10-B SLEX upgrade finally set to roll out

Project underway as TRB issues vital document

By Ronnel W. Domingo

THE P10-BILLION SOUTH LUZON EXPRESSWAY UPGRADE is finally set to roll out now that the Tollways Regulatory Board has issued the final document that will allow proponent South Luzon Tollways Corp. (SLTC) to push through with the project, according to Trade Secretary Peter B. Favila.

Favila said in an interview that the supplemental tollway operation agreement (Stoa) was signed last Wednesday, which would allow the SLTC to follow up its initial preparations undertaken in 2004.

SLTC is an 80 percent-20 percent joint venture between the Malaysian-controlled Hopewell Crown Infrastructure

Inc. and the Philippine National Construction Corp.

The National Development Co., the government's investment arm, will fund a part of the project to secure the right of way.

Favila said that, like the implementation of the reformed value-added tax, the improvement of a vital road that links Metro Manila's seaports with the industrial enclaves south of the capital is key to realizing the government's growth targets.

MYTH #1

AREN'T ALL CARS AS SAFE AS A VOLVO THESE DAYS?

Sadly, no. Although — strange as it might sound — we've tried to make sure they are. For example, when Volvo invented the three point seat belt in 1959 we decided not to patent it so all manufacturers could use it — and save even more lives. (we did the same thing when we invented the catalytic converter in 1976, incidentally. No patent.)

Because when it comes to safety, we're utterly committed to going the extra mile. That's why we build all our cars to safety standards that go far beyond the EURO NCAP star system. No wonder that Folksam, a Swedish crash testing agency, has used data from real-life accidents to calculate that Volvo models are at least 30% safer than the average car. And in the annual Consumers Association safety tests, our whole range consistently beats many cars with a five-star EURO NCAP rating.

The same commitment drove our investment in our multi-million pound Safety Centre in Gothenburg, which has investigated over 30,000 real life accidents involving Volvo cars and used their findings to make our cars even safer.

And because we believe computer simulations tell only half the story, we also conduct over 200 full-scale collisions each year based on what researchers discover on the roads.

We then use this information to create unique safety enhancements from increasing the size of our crumple zones to help protect pedestrians to WHIPS (Whiplash Protection System) proven to reduce the risk of long-term whiplash injury.

MYTH #2

A VOLVO'S NATURAL HABITAT IS THE SLOW LANE

Or at the very most, the middle lane. But put your foot down in a Volvo these days and you'll find that myth disappears as fast as the cars in your rear-view mirror.

After all, Volvo was winning British Touring Car Championships when the competition was still sitting on their dads' shoulders in the stands. And we've carried that love of flat-out thrills into our production cars.

Take the Volvo S60 T5, for example. Available for test drives at Volvo dealerships—but in 2002, the very same car broke 18 land-speed records in 24 hours at Millbrook (including racking up an average speed of 135.1mph). Which makes it the only production car to hold such a record. It packs a mighty 260bhp under the bonnet and 350Nm of torque, yet balanced by an array of performance-enhancing technology designed to keep your car on the road and smile on your face. Slow? Sluggish?

Sorry, we've got to put our foot down on that one.

MYTH #3

OK, BUT AREN'T VOLVO FANS IN THE MINORITY?

Ah, you'd be surprised. In the past few years, it's been Volvo that's been getting the motoring press hot under the collar, not the marques you'd expect. In the words of an international motoring correspondent, 'these day Volvos are cool cars to be seen in'.

Even certain, more notoriously hard to please motoring journalists have been bowled over — 'it must be the sheer brutality of the thing that made it head and shoulders above our favorites. Influenced by the strong kick in the solar plexus, we truly felt that if power and excitement is what you want, this is what you need.'

So if you've ever felt inexplicable feelings of attraction towards a Volvo, take heart. You're not alone. Now why not see where those longing take you?

MYTH #4

VOLVO CARS ARE SLEEK AND STYLISH.

OK. NOW THIS MYTH IS TRUE AND WE TOTALLY AGREE.

Take a look at our current car range and we're sure you'll agree we're definitely sexy and curvy — fluid lines, seductive curves, elegant profiles — you'll find them all over our 2006 range.

But don't take our word for it. The best way to really see how far we've come is to get behind the wheel yourself. So if you like what you read so far — the best is yet to come.

BTr nets P35B from investments

Income up 52 percent from P22.94 billion recorded in 2004

By Michelle V. Remo

THE BUREAU OF THE TREASURY SAID IT earned P35 billion from investing part of the national government's bond sinking fund in foreign securities.

The national government contributes to the fund to ensure payment of maturing obligations, such as long-term sovereign bonds.

The fund is mainly invested in dollar-denominated paper issued by foreign governments.

Government data showed that the P34.812-billion income that the Treasury earned from BSF investments in 2005 was 52 percent more than the P22.94 billion it collected the previous year.

"Investments of the bond sinking fund was one of the main sources of BTr income last year," National Treasurer Omar Cruz earlier said.

The Treasury collected P70.662 billion in revenues last year inclusive of the income from BSF investments.

The Treasury's total revenues for 2005 was almost double the official target of only P36.6 billion, and 9 percent higher than the P64.69 billion collected the previous year.

Other revenue sources of the Treasury, which serves as a depository of the national government's income and a manager of its liabilities, were interest on deposits to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) and other banks, dividends on the government's shares of stock in state-owned companies, and fees and charges collected by government agencies and remitted to the Treasury.

The Treasury's performance made up for the collection shortfalls of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs, the government's two main revenue earners.

The BIR collected only P534.5 billion, or P12.4 billion short of its P546.9-billion target. The BOC, on the other hand, fell short of its P151.2-billion target by P9.5 billion.

But the government has been warned that depending on the Treasury, instead of the government's main revenue earners, to meet fiscal targets was risky.

This year, the BIR is tasked with collecting P675.4 billion. The BOC is required to collect P190.5 billion, while the Treasury is expected to contribute P51.9 billion.

Gokongwei, the 2nd time around

WE HAVE ANOTHER ANECDOTAL EVIDENCE that taipan John Gokongwei Jr. has indeed taken more than an academic interest in the merger-and-acquisition potential of Equitable PCIBank.

The former PCIBank owner the other day called up another former bank director—this we have on good authority—to ask about the possibility of the Bangko Sentral allowing Equitable PCIBank to auction the 10-percent "treasury" block instead of retiring it.

More importantly, Mr. John also asked his former board member the probable market valuation should the 10-percent block be auctioned along with the GSIS stake in Equitable PCIBank.

As it turned out, the first Gokongwei query has already been answered, with no less than Deputy Governor for Supervision and Examination Nestor Espenilla Jr., another free-market believer like the new governor, giving the go-ahead pronouncement.

Earlier, Mr. John had intimated to close associates the possibility of joining an auction should the GSIS, SSS and Romualdez shareholdings, already equivalent to about 46 percent, are offered as one block.

With 10 percent thrown in, translating to undisputed control, the smart money is on Mr. John—the lone taipan without a universal bank—finally crossing an unwritten rule among taipans never to encroach on each other's territory, given that Equitable PCIBank is now the de facto domain of fellow taipan, Henry Sy Sr., with the family's rumored 34-percent stake.

Incidentally, the Equitable PCIBank board will meet again today, with the discussions expected to be lengthy, deep and, given the kind of personal and professional fortunes at stake, passionate.

MVP on Tonyboy's style

PLDT chair Manuel V. Pangilinan gave the first public confirmation that his predecessor and former controlling shareholder Antonio Co-

COCKTALES

Victor C. Agustin

juangco had different, even conflicting, management philosophies.

In his acceptance speech Tuesday night after being named Management Man of the Year, MVP recalled the early days when his First Pacific Group took control of the country's biggest telecom company from Cojuangco.

"When I first reviewed the PLDT budget in December 1998 for the incoming year 1999, I was surprised that the first item for discussion was not sales or revenues, but capital expenditures for equipment," MVP said, supplying the exclamation point. "You can probably infer the reason why."

Money-go-round

FORMER SEC general accountant Roberto Manabat has been recommended by no less than SEC Chair Fe Barin to fill up the lone vacancy in the five-member commission.

Competition among telecom companies is really getting tougher. Globe marketing men have been cold-calling the cell phones of select Smart subscribers, offering free Globe SIM cards.

Heard through the grapevine

THE SECURITIES and Exchange Commission is considering relocating to a squatter-infested government area in Quezon City near the Bureau of Internal Revenue, instead of The Fort, the future site of the unified Philippine Stock Exchange and closer to the SEC's corporate base in Ayala.

Peso settles at 52.09 to US dollar

By Doris C. Dumlaog

THE PESO YESTERDAY CAME close to breaching the 52:1 level, but didn't quite make it.

The peso yesterday hit a high of 52.03 and a low of 52.19 before firming up at a three-year high of 52.09 to the US dollar, same as Wednesday's finish.

"There was good two-way liquidity," said Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Amando Tetangco Jr. "Dollar demand from manufacturing, oil and others was covered by inflows from overseas Filipino workers remittances and portfolio investments."

Overall investor sentiment on the Philippines remained positive, the BSP chief added.

"There's still an upside for the peso. The market will continue to test the 52:1 level and 51.88 after that," said Jonathan Ravelas, chief strategist at Banco de Oro Universal Bank.

Ravelas said certain equity deals in the pipeline—such as the public offering of First Generation Holdings Corp. and the fresh investment committed by Japan's NTT DoCoMo in Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co.—would further perk up the local currency.

said the signing of the STOA would expedite groundwork on the SLEX.

The SLEX project involves the repair of the Alabang viaduct, widening of the stretch from Alabang to Calamba in Laguna, and extending the road to Sto. Tomas in Batangas.

About 60 percent of the traffic of goods in Luzon pass through this vital artery.

Aguilar said the NDC and its private partner, led by Malaysia's MTD Capital Bhd, had already started construction and legal preparations, even when the Stoa was still pending with the TRB.

Customs exceeds January collection goal

By Michelle V. Remo
and Leila B. Salaverria

Fighting target for this year set at P200B

EMERGING FROM A HUGE shortfall last year, the Bureau of Customs started 2006 on a positive note by surpassing its collection target for January.

Newly appointed Customs Commissioner Napoleon Morales said the BOC collected P12.372 billion in January, or 2.4 percent higher than the target for the month of P12.083 billion.

The January collection was also 171-percent higher than the P10.567 billion posted in the same month last year.

"It broke the January jinx of the BOC," Morales said. January is considered a lean month and a difficult time to cough up revenue because it comes after the Christmas season.

"We are tightening the monitoring of valuation to address the problem of technical smuggling," Morales said.

He said undervaluation of imports was among the biggest sources of revenue leakages.

The reported January collection came in the form of cash and did not take into account the BOC's non-cash duty collections.

The Department of Finance, its head agency, is studying the possibility of including non-cash duty and tax collection to be included in the revenue-collection performance of the BOC and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The plan is in line with the proposed shift to accrual accounting system, as practiced in other countries, from the current cash accounting system. The plan, however, has elicited criticisms because it would blot revenue collection without actually giving the government the power to raise spending.

Morales said the ports that exceeded their respective collection targets included those of Batangas, Manila, Zamboanga, Surigao, Tacloban, Legaspi and San Fernando.

Morales, who was appointed customs chief last December replacing Alexander Arevalo, said the BOC would set an internal collection target of P200 billion this year, or higher than the original target of P190.5 billion.

The P190.5-billion target is 26 percent higher than the BOC's target in 2005 of P151.2 billion, which the revenue agency failed to meet.

Last year, the BOC turned in only P141.7 billion in revenue collection.

The BOC's weak performance last year came on the heels of leadership changes in the agency, starting with the replacement of former Customs chief George Jereos by Alberto Luna. Luna was eventually replaced by Arevalo, who later went back to his old post (deputy commissioner) when Morales was appointed customs chief.

Benguet Corp. seeks FTAA for Kingking project

By Christine A. Gaylican

BENGUET Corp. HAS APPLIED FOR THE conversion of the tenement status of the copper porphyry portion of its Kingking property in Eastern Mindanao from a mineral production sharing agreement (MPSA) into a foreign technical assistance agreement (FTAA).

The application was submitted to the Bureau of Mines and Geosciences, an attached agency of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, for approval.

An FTAA allows up to 100 percent foreign ownership in a mining project while MPSA allows only local companies to own a mining venture and to enjoy incentives provided by the government.

In the proposal submitted to BMG, Benguet said the conversion of its MPSA into FTAA was the best approach to encourage investors to develop the copper porphyry portion of Kingking. The other portion of the Kingking property, which is a prospective source of gold, will remain under the MPSA.

In another development, Benguet is holding exploratory talks with a South Korean company for the development of its coal prospect in Surigao del Sur.

Benguet has several new mineral prospects in Luzon and in Mindanao.

Known as the biggest gold mining company in the Philippines and the sixteenth largest in the world, Benguet Corp. has existing chromite operations in Masinloc, Zambales, known internationally as "Masinloc Ore," and a copper-gold operations in San Marcelino, Zambales.

Aside from the existing Acupan Gold project in Benguet that it now shares with small-scale miners, the company is looking at the Kingking Copper-Gold Prospect in Compostela Valley in Davao and the Pantungan Gold prospect in Bataan, according to Benguet assistant vice president Edgar Tabanda.

PLDT considers selling stake in cable TV firm

By Clarissa S. Batino

PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE Co. may sell its interest in a cable television company now controlled by the Lopez group.

"I think it makes sense if we sell Home Cable. They (the Lopezes) are now running the show and we are not very involved in the day-to-day operations," said PLDT president Napoleon Nazareno in an interview.

PLDT's Philippine Home Cable Holdings was merged with two Lopez-owned cable companies in 2003, creating Beyond Cable Holdings (operating under the brand SkyCable). Home Cable owns a third of Beyond Cable.

Nazareno said PLDT was still studying whether it would be better for the company to go into direct-to-home pay TV or offer TV services using Internet Protocol or IPTV.

Both options, according to Nazareno, are being considered. "We have to anticipate the wave of the future," he said.

PLDT seemed to have lost interest in the cable TV business since last year. It earlier offered to swap its interest in Home Cable for control of Lopez phone company, Bayan Telecommunications Inc.

Also last year, PLDT negotiated with former PLDT owner Antonio Cojuangco for the telco's bid to acquire Philippine Multi-Media System Inc., operator of Dream Satellite TV.

Both talks—to acquire Bayantel in exchange for Home Cable and to buy Dream Satellite TV—failed in the fourth quarter. Sources said the price tags for both companies were too high.

Nazareno said Cojuangco's group, given the strategic alliance between Dream Satellite TV and SkyCable, might be interested to buy PLDT's stake in Home Cable. The Lopez group could also opt to buy PLDT's stake in the Lopez-owned cable TV company.

TOURISTS appreciate the coffee sold by enterprising vendors

Unusual ventures help revive tourism in Baguio

ENTREPRENEURS have taken to selling foodstuff aboard the boats

Text and photos by EV Espiritu
PDI Northern Luzon Bureau

BAGUIO CITY—THE YEAR OF the Fire Dog brings unusual business ideas to this city.

These are fresh attempts to revive the summer capital's tourism market, which suffered from the meningococemia outbreak that turned away tourists in 2004 and early 2005.

Homemade apparel for dogs and floating sari-sari stores at the Burnham Lake are some of the new businesses sprouting here.

Joel Ramboyoung, 35, an ice cream vendor, built a small rowboat and is now selling pretzels, chicharon (pork cracklings) and soda to tourists who relax in the middle of the man-made lake.

Ramboyoung says it dawned on him that vacationing families who rent boats for an hour become hungry and thirsty, thus his services were essential to keeping tourists happy.

Allan Manuel, who rents out boats, says the floating sari-sari store is boosting rentals

APPAREL for dogs are selling well in this summer capital at the lake, although the city government has yet to legitimize this innovative trade.

Tourists also seek the P12-a-cup of coffee sold by Raffy Hora.

Hora, 23, is one of a dozen vendors, who decided that lugging around containers filled with hot coffee is the ticket to earning from Burnham Park.

Tina Catam, on the other hand, thought that extending a service to the pets of vacationing families meant a potentially high income, so she began tailoring suits fit for dogs.

Her parents sell her dog uniforms along downtown sidewalks, beside dog collar peddlers.

But it is the expansion of convenience stores all over Baguio, which has become a commercial trend here owing to the number of tourists, who enjoy Baguio's chilly nights.

Emilita Ignacio, owner of the Kapamilya Minumart on Marcos Highway, says prospects for midnight shops are high because tourists have developed a vibrant 24-hour lifestyle in this quaint American-built city.

BOATS for rent are a usual sight in Burnham Park

Power Plant draws winner of Grand Audi A4

EVERYONE WANTED IT—THE MOST

lucrative prize of the season, a 2006 Audi A4. From those who dropped a few raffle stubs to those who entered in the hundreds, all waited with bated breath as Power Plant VP for retail, JP Masakayan, together with PGA Cars Inc president Miguel G. Coyuto, drew the winning entry.

And the keys went to Mykhilyn Narvaez of Sacramento, California!

What a way to drive the year! And all because of a simple shopping trip to Rockwell's Power Plant Mall last Jan. 11 when the lucky balikbayan made a handful of purchases at the mall's Lacoste store.

Mykhilyn was beside herself with disbelief when informed of her amazing fortune. And with good reason: she was in Hong Kong on her way back to the United States!

What a fashionable start to 2006 as Rockwell, the address of fashionable Manila, and PGA Cars transformed a traditional holiday raffle into the sensational retail event it had become. "Literally, this is just the start!" as AVP-general manager Malou Pineda promises a slew of exciting events to reward loyal Power Plant shoppers.

Tumble Tots launches contest for parents

AN ESSAY-WRITING CONTEST HAS BEEN launched for parents on why they like the way their children's positive personalities are being developed by international pre-school Tumble Tots.

The launch of the "Why I Love Tumble Tots" contest was led by managing director Dyan Bian-Cortez of Tumble Tots Philippines, the national franchise holder of this UK-based international pre-school with over 500 centers in Europe and Asia.

Cortez said the contest would draw firsthand accounts of the parents' experiences with their own children enrolled in Tumble Tots.

"This year's contest winners will receive more exciting prizes than last year's, the first time the competition was held," Cortez added, citing how parents confirmed the effectiveness of the Tumble Tots program.

This international preschool program focuses on the intellectual and motor skills development of children between six months and seven years old.

Based on scientific studies and child development research, the program is designed to develop children's literacy as well as their skills of agility, balancing, coordination and climbing in a safe and loving environment.

The children are guided through each piece of equipment as they gain confidence and independence while having lots of fun.

"A child learns best through play, which is the language of childhood. This helps him/her develop concepts, understand how things and ideas are connected, and develop basic skills in reading, writing and communication," Cortez explained.

"Tumble Tots develops a child's positive personality traits of self-confidence, self-esteem, self-discipline and independence, thus enhancing their personal and social skills and their chances of success in later life," Cortez added.

This comprehensive development comes in stages as the child grows, learns, and explores the world at his own pace, thereby acquiring creativity and sense of achievement while making his self-worth grow from his own feelings of mastery of the tasks he has chosen.

The curriculum is divided into structured, trainer-facilitated programs for gymababes of 6 months old to walking, walking to 2 years old, 2 to 3 years old, 3 to 5 years old, and gymababes juniors of 5 to 6 years old and seniors of 6 to 7 years old.

At the end of the program, the children will show tremendous improvements in listening attentively and intelligently, acquiring a well-developed vocabulary and good use of the spoken language in taking part in discussions, read simple words and phrases, perform basic math operations, and manifest writing and social readiness.

Tumble Tots started in the United Kingdom in 1979 and has benefited more than a million children. Since then, the Tumble Tots family has grown to over 500 centers in the United Kingdom, Germany, and Asia-including Singapore, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand and, now the Philippines. The Asia-Pacific region currently has over a hundred thousand active members.

In the Philippines, Tumble Tots is located at the ground floor of Technoplasia I at Eastwood City Cyberpark in Libis, Quezon City (687-6793, 687-6375, 0917-7010097) and along Mabini Street, Davao City (082-2251847).

Upon enrolling with Tumble Tots, each child receives a personalized membership pack, plus privileged access to many special events organized in the Philippines and other branches worldwide.

Members are automatically insured while participating in Tumble Tots sessions. They also receive special discounts and offers from various partner companies and sponsors of Tumble Tots.

Write your personal history for JSP symposia

ARE YOU A FILIPINO? HAVE YOU been to Japan? Have you worked with Japanese? Did you study in Japan? Are you Japanese? Have you been to the Philippines? Have you worked with Filipinos? 'Bling' promo ups card sales

By Margie Quimpo-Espino

HOW DOES IT FEEL TO WEAR P600,000 on your finger?

Debbie Koa-Lin, winner of HSBC's Red Mastercard "Love Yourself" promo, was speechless when bank executives Marion Balagot and Martin Cook called her to tell her she had won a GIA-certified 1.39 carat diamond ring.

Just a few weeks before her name was picked, she was kidding her husband Jackson to buy her a diamond ring on their 10th wedding anniversary—not that she is fond of "bling blings" as jewelry has come to be called these days. It was more an endearing joke.

The 1.39 karat G-color diamond with a retail price of P600,000 bought from one of the jewelry shops in Manila is kept in a vault of HSBC. The diamond will be for Debbie and Jackson's third baby—due in March. Fittingly, the baby is a girl according to the ultra sound and will be named Abigail Joyce.

Debbie says she uses her Red Mastercard for personal expenses although when she got it in 2004, she used it for all of the family's purchases.

"Now it's only my expenses which I load," she says which includes books, groceries and gifts for herself, family and friends.

This is part of the objective of the HSBC Red Mastercard—a credit card that answers women's needs. HSBC Red Mastercard is the first credit card for women in the Philippines. Which is why they chose a diamond as a prize for the promo. Under the promo every P300 charged to the Red Mastercard earned raffle entries to win the ring.

HSBC deputy CEO Martin Cook and Debbie Koa-Lin with the ring that was the object of women's desire for months.

"When we do TV commercials, we look at what women like. Women put other people's needs ahead of theirs but they like bags, shoes, jewelry—depending on the status of the woman," explains Balagot, HSBC VP for credit card marketing.

Travel, she says, is desired by both males and females.

By coming up with the diamond promo, they wanted to attract the women.

Laine Santana, VP for public affairs, says the promo worked as it exceeded card targets by 30 percent meaning they had a 30-percent increase in new cards approved.

Balagot says they had initially wanted to have several diamond rings raffled but HSBC deputy CEO Martin Cook wanted a spectacular one, thus the P600,000 rock.

As for Debbie, she thinks her coming baby is truly a blessed one as she had been receiving many good tidings, since her second term.

An accountant who finished top in the CPA board exams, Debbie says she's not frivolous in her needs but likes to travel.

During the interview, she broke into tears when she talked about the death of her 16-year-old Persian cat—her first major purchase via a credit card that was an extension of her dad's.

While in the pet shop, another cat kept looking at her with forlorn eyes, she ended up buying two. Price tag for the cats was P10,000. It was near her birthday so dad did not get mad.

Debbie's dad is an interesting man who took up law at age 60 and passed the bar recently. She works for his accounting firm.

Husband Jackson works for his family's engineering firm. They have two older kids.

How a soap became a household name

PROCTER & GAMBLE'S FLAGSHIP brand in the Philippines turned 40 years.

This brand, which has become a household name since 1966, is the only toilet and bath soap dedicated to providing "superior skin germ protection" to help keep families healthy and help make a healthy nation.

Safeguard has dominated the market in 40 years making the brand a part of Filipino life.

P&G president and general manager Johnp Cua best explained Safeguard's status during the launch of a nationwide educational roadshow to promote hygiene in 2002.

Cua said, "We at Procter & Gamble, through Safeguard, have made the promotion of good hygiene habits among Filipinos a priority. Safeguard's vision is to help make a healthier nation. We have been single-minded in our educational message. Practicing proper hygiene habits, with soap that provides superior protection against germs, helps families stay healthy."

That vision, which took shape 40 years ago, was backed by innovations and technologies that helped Safeguard sustain its leadership of the consumer market.

Attaining that vision required the involvement of other sectors. In 1997, P&G, Unicef and five other agencies—the Philippine Association of Medical Technologists, the Department of Education and Culture, the Department of Health, the Philippine Hospital Association, and the Kapangan ng mga Brodkaster sa Pilipinas—formed an alliance to undertake a National Health and Hygiene Program under a campaign called Kalusugan, Kalusugan, Kaunlaran (KKK).

Cua said the project aims to reduce hygiene-related diseases via proper personal hygiene, highlighting the importance and practice of the three steps to good health (hand washing, bathing, keeping surroundings clean)—recognized to be the simplest yet most effective way to prevent illnesses.

"As a market leader, Safeguard continues to create a strong bond with Filipino consumers, touching and improving their lives through partnership programs like Alagang Safeguard, Alagang Nanay for the family, Safeguard Unicef Handog 2big Operation for school children, and Handog ng Safeguard ... Medrechs ng Kinabukasan Scholarship Program for the youth, among others," Cua added.

As part of its 40th year celebration, Safeguard is sponsoring the 2nd International Health and Hygiene Symposium in Manila on Feb. 9-10 where some 150 health and hygiene experts from seven countries are expected to attend.

ZYLA stringing the 108 black Mala beads

Now selling: Beads that can 'make you good'

By Frank Cimatu
PDI Northern Luzon Bureau

BAGUIO CITY—BEADS, BANGLES AND trinkets have become so ubiquitous in the country that if one strings them into a necklace, it could choke the world many times over.

So how can you sell your stuff in this bead-weary world? How about selling beads that can save your life or simply make you a good person?

Dzi (pronounced "zee") and mala beads are the best selling items in Namaste (Asian Arts and Trade), a local shop specializing in Nepali and Tibetan items.

Shop owner Zyla Shakya says their customers for these types of beads used to be only Buddhists and seasoned travelers.

"Now we get customers from all walks of life," says 22-year-old Shakya, whose mother, Alice Aquino-Shakya, started the family's trading business last year.

Buying the mala and dzi beads is particularly auspicious when done in the New Year, Shakya says.

Dzi are black and white Tibetan beads of etched agate (a common semiprecious silica mineral) that has long been used as a gem and ornamental. These are decorated with circular designs known as "Buddha's eyes."

A nine-eyed dzi bead in Namaste costs P950. It is supposed to give its owner good fortune, divine protection, good health, wealth, prosperity from heaven, double longevity, victory over foes, windfall luck and ultimate good luck.

A five-eyed dzi bead costs P750 and is supposed to help one accumulate wealth, good luck and material gain, attract people useful to you, attract more money, valuables and food and basic good fortune.

A three-eyed dzi bead is supposed to give one prosperity, happiness and longevity and costs P425.

For those who are more into the form rather than the function, Namaste also sells porcelain dzi beads in all colors for P35 each.

The dzi beads can be worn as a bracelet or necklace alone or with other semi-precious stones.

The other hot item in Namaste is the mala or the dharna bead, which is a fad in the West Coast of the United States, where most of the Tibetan refugees stay.

Shakya says "mala" means "garland of flowers" in Sanskrit. A mala is composed of either 27, 54 or 108 beads. The number 108 is especially sacred for Buddhists because it represents the nine planets multiplied by the 12 astrological signs.

Among the trendsetters for mala are the Dalai Lama, who prefers the "tiger eye" as beads, and Hollywood actor Richard Gere, who is often seen with a 108 wooden bead mala on his wrist.

Like the rosary, the mala bead is used for prayer, usually in the form of a mantra.

Namaste also sells previously worn mala necklaces from P1,500 up.

The wooden mala sold by Namaste include beads made from sandalwood, teak, rosewood and bodhi and tulsi seeds.

Shakya says the wearer could mix the beads depending on their preferences like health needs, astrological signs and color.

EARN MONEY BY LEARNING HOW TO make soap

In line with the government's program to promote livelihood opportunities for the unemployed and entrepreneurs, Golden Treasure Skills and Development Program (GTS-DP) will conduct a one-day seminar on "Soap Making" to be held at UPAA Alumni Center, Magsaysay Avenue, cor. Ylanan Street, University of the Philippines, Diliman, Quezon City on Feb. 11, 2006 (Saturday) from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. We are inviting all those people who would like to venture into soap-making business in order to learn the process, technique, procedures on how to make soap and be a part of this once in a lifetime experience.

Among the topics to be discussed are: Theories and Principles of Soap Making, Sourcing of Materials and Pricing on Different Kinds of Soap. Also there will be hands-on experience on the making of different kinds of soap such as liquid dishwashing soap, liquid hand soap, liquid all-purpose soap, bar detergent soap, (all purpose) powder soap, herbal bath soap (papaya, kaamansi, oatmeal, etc.) fabric softener, liquid bleach. Added feature of the seminar is free lecture on smart entrepreneurship, "Tips on How to Start and Manage your Own Soap Business."

Participants will receive certificate of training right after the seminar, including lunch and snacks. Samples of soaps will be given including handouts and more. Those who are interested may call 952-29-34/952-40-28/421-85-93/ 436-78-26 and 951-29-66. This seminar is open to all than 100-unit-condo project gave Ayala Land billions in revenue. The magnitude of the marketing task (MMT), another marketing concept worth your mastering, is accountable and manageable.

We've been asked: "How do you sustain marketing success in niche marketing?" Learn from best practice, that is, benchmark. Consider, for example, Nike. This athletic shoemaker has remained a market leader by innovating in more and more niches. It continued to design special shoes for more and more sports and exercises. It went into shoe-owning niches for running, then basketball, hiking, tennis, biking, golf, badminton, and so on. Within each niche, it also grew the niche by developing variants. For example, in basketball, it came out with a Nike Air Jordan, a Pump, etc.

Innovate

Innovating, then, is one key in sustaining niche success. Now, there's a difference between an innovation and an invention. Michael Polk, president of Unilever USA, made the distinction by saying that invention was the R&D approach of the 90s: "It's science leading to new products." In today's new product race, Polk says innovation has replaced invention. According to Polk, "innovation is about simpler, smarter value-solutions that are changing the consumer and the status quo of the marketplace." He referred in particular to Starbucks as the model innovator. Starbucks successfully convinced consumers "to buy a $4 cup of coffee in place of a 2-cent cup of supermarket coffee."

The other key is to go for multiple niching instead of remaining as a single "niche". Consider today's No. 1 global pharmaceutical company, Pfizer. This company started and became big by niching. It first attended to products for market niches like Terramycin for skin cuts, eye-drops (Visine) for tired eyes, the pain-relieving cream Bengay, and the like. It relentlessly applied the market segmentation prescription: "To get big, go small." It started with small markets, that is, niches. In the process, it was more than amply rewarded.

So if you want to explore niche marketing, let's summarize our Marketing Rx's. Start with market niche understanding. Understand the niches available to your business. By understanding we refer to profiling the "market attractiveness" of each of those niches beginning with each niche's market size (and not just population size). Then, understand the priority product needs and values of each niche's consumers, and how satisfied or disappointed these consumers are with the available brands in the niche. And then get realistic about your company's marketing capabilities in effectively participating in each niche. This niche profiling will enable you to rank order the niches in terms of which to enter first and which for later.

Next, learn to innovate so that you will know how to stay owner of a niche or to sustain your significant participation in it. Then proceed to learn how to be a multiple nicher instead of remaining in a single niche.

Incidentally, you say you are a non-marketing executive anxious to learn marketing quickly. You and your non-marketer friends might want to watch for our forthcoming seminar on "Marketing for Non-marketers" this coming April.

www.diamondhotel.comHow can you make money in a niche market?

Q: I'M NEW IN MARKET-ing. My background is accounting. Because I keep dabbling in marketing, I've recently been transferred to marketing as a product manager. We're in the fast moving consumer goods (FMCG) business but we're a local firm. The marketing training that our company's training budget approved for me consisted of attending marketing seminars and conferences. I recently attended a marketing seminar where one of the speakers talked about market segmentation. In one portion of his talk, he said mass marketing is dead. It's marketing to market segments that's the name today of the marketing game. In fact, he said, it's fast becoming a niche marketing game. He did not elaborate on niche marketing but simply defined a niche as "a small market that larger companies like the multinationals won't bother about." I wanted to ask a question but there was not enough time during the Q&A period. My accounting training led me to wonder how my company can make money in a niche. After all, the speaker himself said that a niche is a small market.

A: In our own marketing seminars, we've been asked this question before by those new to marketing or non-marketers who have been transferred to marketing or given marketing responsibilities. The key marketing concept to apply here is the market size concept. When you heard the reference to a "small market," that's about the niche's population size. It's the population size that's small. The market size concept tells you that a niche's population size is not that niche's market size. Let's recall the market size definition.

As you can readily calculate in your accounting trained mindset, the two multipliers of "usage frequency" and "average spending" can make a niche with even a very small population size become a larger market size than a market segment with a population size that's multiple of a niche's.

Consider our favorite example of the Class AB niche as compared to the large population sized segment of Class DE for vitamin. In population size, the DE segment is about 7 times the AB niche. But because the average AB niche consumer takes vitamins everyday, twice a day, it has an annual usage frequency of 730 (365 x 2) versus the average DE segment consumer's annual usage frequency of 6. The average DE consumer takes vitamins only when he/she is sick. Average illness occurrence is twice a year at an average period of 6 days per illness. Vitamin consumption is at an average of half the illness period. So these statistics make for an annual average usage frequency of 6 [(6 days of illness)/2] x (2 times a year))

MARKETING
RxDr. Ned Roberto & Ardy Roberto

Just taking in consideration the first multiplier, namely, usage frequency, the AB niche has a market size of 730 [(1 population size index) x (730 usage frequency)] versus the DE segment's market size of only 42 [(7 population size index) x (6 usage frequency)]. That means the market size of the AB "small" market niche is at least 17 times the market size of the DE "large" market segment! We said "at least" because this is considering only one of the two multipliers for computing market size. In population size, it's the reverse: the DE segment is seven times the AB niche's population size. So always think "market size" and not "population size." Your making money comes much more from market size and not just from population size.

Examples of "nicheing"

Today, market niches are all around you... even in the mass market. Look at Unilever's deodorant brand, "Axe." This brand successfully made sales and profit by "nicheing" into the population of young men, not all of them, but only those young men who are "after a deep relationship with a girl." That's a niche, a small population size. But their usage frequency is high and willing to pay a premium for a deodorant specifically tailored to their needs. We understand from our Unilever friends that it is now the main contributor to the more than 10 percent growth in the company's participation in the deodorant category! There's a local equivalent (though in a different category) to Axe. That's Eskno's "Master", the Esknoi for a special niche of young men.

The extreme in market nicheing is in real property marketing. Look at Ayala Land. Its initial target market was the niche of all niches: the very few and countable Class AAA consumers. Yet selling to this niche, say, a less

with logo engraved in contrasting colors on the temple length

THE Roberto Cavalli Eyewear line, produced by Marcolin, cleverly interprets the moods of the Italian designer's fashion collection.

The collection, which features both sunglasses and prescription frames, is expected to hit Manila stores soon. In fact, sunglasses are initially available at Rustan's Makati and Aabang.

The line offers close-fitting and daring shapes in bold colors and intricate details cross-over on the bridge, with appealing knot intersections, or temples enriched by applications in diamante, in designs suggesting the symbols of the snake.

Large and enveloping masks are making a comeback. They have a double bridge coming either plain or cutting into the lens to form a heart right in the center of the frame in the metal versions. The acetate versions are in decidedly retro style, harking back to the '70s, all of them very large, in pearly or lacquer effect colorings.

The acetate models come in dark tones such as gloss black and dark brown. At times the logo is positioned on the temple, on a horizontal plaque, or on the cusp between front and temple.

The Roberto Cavalli Eyewear line is exclusively distributed by The Opto, Inc. in the Philippines.

ONE THING ABOUT EXPERTS IS THAT they can do what they do best with their eyes shut, palanggas. But in the case of the popular events management specialist, Thoughts and Notions, they did it with their lips sealed as well.

Brilliant Carina Cruz, owner of Thoughts and Notions, organized a surprise birthday dinner for her friends and clientele at the poolside of the exclusive Paseo Parkview Suites.

It was a chill-out evening of caviar, salmon, fresh oysters and great fun. But when Carina's rahl rahl team is gathered, palanggas, it can't be "just another event."

So Carina's friends all came to give her a rousing greeting: television's Karen Davila, Cito Beltran, host of "Straight Talk", numero uno publicist Louie Cruz and his brother, Mateo Cruz, Sandro Rieta of Mc Sandro Bistro, everyone's favorite restaurant in Boracay, Larry Leviste, Rowena Cuyco, and Dboy Trofeo.

My big boss, Letty Jimenez Magsanoc, with Nancy Carvajal, joined the bash. By this time, Armand Cruz, Al Bantol, PJ and Rame-lyn Francisco, Rey Memjie, Peggy Santos, Fides Alejandro, Pia Fernandez, Verna Villanueva, Roy Repalda, Willie Munji and Cesar Kindara, plus others like them, had a blast to the max.

Suddenly, Carina was pulled aside by one of her guests, who was having what appeared to be a lover's spat with her boyfriend in the midst of the party. The celebrator took no time in consoling her pal. Little did Carina know, that as she rejoined her party, 40 cakes to match her age, each cake with a candle, were brought to her. It was a surprise gift from Louie Cruz!

Carina was floored. Four of her close chums—singers Isay Alvarez, Robert Sena, Pinky Marquez and Bimbo Carrudo—belted out an amazing a cappella birthday song and got the happening on a roll until, way, way past the crowing of the roosters.

That night was definitely a testimony to how an occasion, however ordinary, can be made extraordinary by creative staging. The difference was that the tables were turned, making the usually coo, Carina awed.

Golf for miles

Hey, all those golf lovers and members of the Mabuhay Miles Elite and Premier Elite of Philippine Airlines' frequent flyer program, got together at the Riviera Golf Club for the annual Mabuhay Miles Elite Invitational Golf Tournament, palanggas.

Young taipan Lucio "Bong" Tan Jr., hotshot executive vice president of Fortune Tobacco Corp., scored a cool three over par 74 at the tough Langer course.

Another taipan, Stewart Go, president of Philippine Fabrikoid Inc., carded a net 68, on a gross round of 79.

Needless to say, palanggas, both gentlemen emerged as the day's big winners. There were

WITHOUT BATTING AN EYELASH

Hot lady Lilibeth de Villa dominated the ladies' division with a super impressive 72 out of a gross 91, while Jose Antonio Lim ruled the guests' division with a net 68 from 81.

Après a totally great game, it was time to party. Fantastic entertainment was dished out by Asia Agcaoli, Gino Padilla, and Sheree. The emcee, our palangga Archie Lacson, kept the members in complete attention.

On top of the major prizes, Philippine Airlines gave away Mabuhay Class tickets to Los Angeles, Honolulu, Sydney, Saigon and Hong Kong. Now if that ain't awesome, I don't know what is.

METRO MANILA Franklin GRAHAM FESTIVAL

FEBRUARY 2-5, 2006 • RIZAL PARK, MANILA

Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham, in Manila

By Tanya Sevilla for the MMFGP

Manila, 19 January 2005. Franklin Graham, the son of the renowned evangelist Billy Graham, is in Manila to carry out the great commission to deliver Christ's message of salvation. Hope abounds in the Philippines as the Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival takes place at the Rizal Park, Quirino Grandstand, on February 2 to 5, 2006.

Rev. Franklin Graham

The Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival is an evangelical event that aims to bring the gospel of Jesus Christ to the greatest number of Filipinos, beginning in Metro Manila and effectively to the whole nation. Evangelist Franklin Graham was invited to conduct the festival by the evangelical Christian churches in the Philippines composed of the Alliance of Baptist Councils (ABC), National Council of Churches in the Philippines (NCCP), Philippine Council of Evangelical Churches (PCEC), Philippines for Jesus Movement - Jesus is Lord Church (PJM-JIL), and the Independent Churches and Christian Organizations with the cooperation of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association.

Franklin Graham's father, Dr. Billy Graham, visited the Philippines in September 1977 for the Metro Manila Billy Graham Crusade, which was also held at the Quirino Grandstand. Continuing the work his father started, Franklin has led as many as five evangelistic festivals each year around the world. Graham is committed to visiting many smaller areas where his father's crusades normally would not go. This is Franklin's first festival in Asia and will use the Philippine Festival as a gateway to more festivals in this region. Already, the Okinawa, Japan Festival is set for November 2006.

The Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival is part of a worldwide mission to mobilize the greatest number of people to hear the Gospel and be invited to respond, to be disciplined and integrated in the local Church to worship and serve the Lord.

Volunteer organizers of the Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival are already conducting prayer rallies, training sessions, and other preparations to receive anticipated large crowds at each night of the festival. Preparations began as far back as January 2005.

Everyone is invited to go to the festival and bring their friends and loved ones along to worship, pray, and hear God's message of hope and freedom. The MMFGP happens at 6:30 p.m. from February 2 to 4 (Thursday to Saturday) and 5:00 p.m. on February 5 (Sunday). Parents are invited to bring their children to "Pistang Pambata" on February 4 at 8:00 a.m. For more information, call the Festival Office at 916-3014 or check the website at www.mmfgp.org.

FRANKLIN GRAHAM

Growing Up Graham

"Just being the son of Billy Graham won't get me into heaven." (Franklin Graham, 1996)

William Franklin Graham III, born July 14, 1952, is the fourth of five children of evangelist Billy Graham and his wife, Ruth Bell Graham. Raised in a log home in the Appalachian Mountains outside Asheville, N.C., Franklin now lives in the mountains of Boone, N.C.

At age 22, after a period of rebellion and traveling the world, Franklin committed his life to Jesus Christ while alone in a hotel room in Jerusalem. Soon after, Dr. Bob Pierce, founder of Samaritan's Purse, invited Franklin to join him on a six-week mission to Asia. It was during that time that Franklin felt a calling to work with hurting people in areas of the world affected by war, famine, disease, poverty and natural disaster.

Franklin Graham the International Relief Worker

"I've been called to the slums of the streets and the ditches of the world." (Franklin Graham, 1998)

Franklin was elected to the board of Samaritan's Purse in 1978, and one year later, following the death of Dr. Pierce, he was elected as the president of the organization. Today, he serves as president and CEO of the international relief organization headquartered in Boone, N.C. Samaritan's Purse has an annual budget of $239 million and provides relief and assistance in more than 100 countries worldwide. It has international offices in Canada, the United Kingdom, Ireland, the Netherlands, Germany, Australia, Austria plus field offices in more than a dozen developing countries.

Franklin Graham the Evangelist

"Evangelistic preaching is what Daddy does, I never thought I would." (Franklin Graham 1995)

Franklin conducted his first evangelistic event in 1989 and committed to spend 10 percent of his time preaching. Each year, he conducts Festivals around the world as an evangelist for the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA). Since 1989, he has preached to more than 4 million people in cities from Johannesburg, South Africa to Taipei, Mississippi. Franklin's 2005 Festival schedule includes events in Hobart, Australia; Melbourne, Australia; Asuncion, Paraguay; Lubango, Angola; Chisinau, Moldova; Corpus Christi, Texas; and Shreveport, La.

The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association appointed Franklin Graham CEO in 2000 and president of the organization in 2001. He has served as first vice-chairman of the BGEA since 1995.

Franklin has authored several books, including The Name (Thomas Nelson, 2002), All for Jesus (co-authored with Ross Rhoads, Thomas Nelson, 2003), Living Beyond the Limits: A Life Sync with God (Thomas Nelson, 1998), and his autobiography, Rebel with a Cause: Finally Comfortable Being Graham (Autobiography, Thomas Nelson, 1995).

Franklin and his wife, Jane, live in North Carolina and have four children, Will, Roy, Edward, and Cissie, and three grandchildren.

Billy Graham Evangelistic Association Fact Sheet

Chairman: William Franklin "Billy" Graham II since 1950
President/CEO: William Franklin Graham III since 2000
Founded: 1950, by Billy Graham
Programs: The following are the ministries of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association:

• Billy Graham Crusades: Billy Graham has preached the Gospel to more than 210 million people in live audiences at hundreds of crusades, missions, and evangelistic rallies, including Mission World and Global Mission, in North America and around the world. He also developed the early use of television specials in the 1950s, which today are regularly broadcast in prime time in almost every market in the United States and Canada, reaching an average of 3 million households per telecast.

• Franklin Graham Festivals: Since 1989, Franklin Graham has preached the Gospel at more than 100 evangelistic festivals in 33 states and 17 other countries. The BGEA appointed Franklin Graham CEO in 2000 and president of the organization in 2001. He has served as first vice-chairman of the BGEA since 1995. Franklin also serves as president of Samaritan's Purse, an international relief organization based in Boone, N.C.

• My Hope: Through this innovative movement for personal evangelism across a nation, churches and Christian families are encouraged, trained, and mobilized to open their homes to friends and neighbors and share the Gospel using television broadcasts produced by the BGEA in the local languages. Since the program was launched in 2002, 1.6 million people in 11 countries have made decisions for Christ. More than 704,000 of those were in Colombia in 2004, marking the largest evangelistic campaign in a single country in BGEA history.

• Decision Magazine: The official monthly publication of the BGEA, founded in 1960, has a circulation of more than one million - making it one of the largest religious periodicals in the world. Issues include messages by Billy and Franklin Graham; Bible studies and devotional helps; practical features on Christian living; inspiring personal testimonies; event reports; and news of evangelism around the world.

• Billy Graham Training Center at The Cove: This retreat center opened in 1991 to offer multi-day seminars on a variety of Christian subjects. Located on 1,500 woodland acres in Asheville, N.C., the Billy Graham Training Center features nationally recognized speakers throughout the year. The Training Center also offers the Cove Camp for youth ages 9-15, to experience spiritual growth and adventure.

• Schools of Evangelism: A group of schools to train pastors and Christian leaders to more effectively reach out to their local communities. A typical School of Evangelism consists of 2 1/2 days of intense training in the preparations to do evangelism through the local church and then to teach individuals who place their faith in Christ. More than 109,000 church leaders have participated in the schools in North America since their inception in 1967.

• World Wide Publications: Millions of copies of Billy Graham's books, available in 38 languages, have been distributed around the world. Billy Graham titles include Peace With God, The Holy Spirit, How To Be Born Again, Angels: God's Secret Agents, Facing Death and The Life After, Storm Warning, and Just As I Am, Graham's memoirs.

• World Wide Pictures: Since the debut of Mr. Texas, in 1951, Billy Graham evangelistic films have been translated into 38 languages and viewed by more than 250 million people in theaters and churches and on TV. World Wide Pictures has produced and distributed more than 125 productions - from 15-minute television programs to some 25 feature-length films, including The Hiding Place, PowerPlay, Join A Vow to Cherish, The Ride, Road to Redemption, The Climb, and Last Flight Out. These films are shown at prisons and correctional facilities nationwide.

• Cutting-Edge Electronic Evangelism: Radio Programs - The weekly "Hour of Decision" radio program, begun in 1950, is broadcast on Sundays to virtually every part of the United States and most areas of Canada. Other countries around the world receive the broadcast via short wave and medium wave radio in four different languages.

• Telecasts: Television broadcasts of select Billy Graham Crusades and Franklin Graham Festivals air across North America during prime time. An average of 250 stations - including some 90 percent of network affiliates - across the United States and Canada have carried the telecasts in prime time four to six times annually.

• Satellite Broadcasts: The BGEA's strategic, creative use of broadcast media was demonstrated in 1995 through Global Mission. This conference in Puerto Rico was the most complex technological worldwide effort and the largest evangelistic outreach in the history of the church. The event was transmitted via satellite to a total of 10 million people at 3,000 locations in 185 countries and territories.

• Billy Graham Response Center: To provide information and service to people with spiritual needs and questions, the Response Center opened in June of 1998. During 2003, the center handled more than 23,000 e-mails and 200,000 calls from individuals using the toll-free number, 1-877-2GRAHAM (1-877-247-2426). The Response Center takes calls 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

• Christian Guidance: The Christian Guidance Department in the Charlotte office handles letters, telecast follow-up forms, phone calls, and e-mail from an average of 130,000 people annually - many of whom are in desperate circumstances, experiencing every conceivable type of problem. A trained staff responds to spiritual needs and matters of biblical concern.

• TV / Telephone Ministry: The TV / Telephone Ministry in conjunction with the Billy Graham event telecasts began nationwide in March 1981 and has since served more than one million people. From the privacy of their homes, people are encouraged to call a telephone number on their screen to receive spiritual help.

• Internet: (www.BillyGraham.org) The BGEA Internet outreach includes all of the organization's ministries and special events online. In 2003, the BGEA Web sites logged more than 5.4 million visits with some 6,400 visitors registering a commitment to Jesus online. Web site visitors can listen online to the "Hour of Decision" radio program, watch webcasts of events, read Decision magazine, or find response to spiritual questions.

• Offices: After 50 years in Minneapolis, the organization has relocated its headquarters to The Billy Graham Parkway in Charlotte, N.C. The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association also has offices in Canada, Australia, Great Britain, and Germany.

Billy Graham and his son Franklin Graham

About Franklin Graham

On a cold November night in 1983, 31-year-old Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham, was asked to preach for the first time in his life. Longtime friend and evangelist John Wesley White urged Franklin to share the pulpit for one night. To Graham, whose job as the head of relief organization Samaritan's Purse often put him in bullet-dodging, life and death situations, the task was a daunting one. Not only did he have to overcome the pressure of following in his father's mighty footsteps, but he also had to overcome a rebellious past that included drinking, smoking, and running from God.

Franklin reluctantly accepted the invitation and preached that night, with surprising results, especially for the son of Billy Graham. Not one of the 1,000 people in attendance responded when Graham issued the call for them to "come forward" and give their lives to Christ. Following that disheartening experience, Graham swore he'd never preach again.

But White felt sure Franklin had a gift like his father's and finally persuaded him to preach again in 1989 at an evangelistic festival in Juneau, Alaska. This time, the people responded. "They packed the place, drunks and prostitutes," said White. "He gave the invitation and they poured down. It was a miracle, and he knew it."

Since then, Franklin has led as many as 5 evangelistic Festivals each year for the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA). To date, he has led more than 100 Festivals in locations from Wichita, Kansas, to Sydney, Australia, speaking to more than 3.4 million people. While he preached to his largest Festival to date in Peru, speaking to 207,000 people, Graham is committed to visiting many smaller areas where his father's crusades normally would not go.

"Telling someone else the Good News of Jesus Christ is one of the greatest privileges I know..." - Franklin Graham

"God set me free from the power of sin in my life. He'll do the same for you. He loves you. He'll forgive you. He will set you free." - Franklin Graham

Franklin Graham partners with local churches in Manila

On September 23, 2004, six Christian leaders representing the Philippine Council of Evangelical Churches (PCEC) in the persons of Bishop Efraim Tendaro, Fred Magbanua, Cesar Punzalan and Greg Tingson, Alliance of Baptist Councils (ABC) President Bishop Reuben Abante and JEMELIF Bishop (Retired) George Castro, invited Franklin Graham, son of Dr. Billy Graham and current President and CEO of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA) to come to Manila to conduct an evangelistic festival. BGEA is a Christian Organization based in Charlotte, North Carolina, USA. For the past 60 years, BGEA has been known worldwide for its passion for preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ through the ministry of Dr. Billy Graham. This work is complemented by its partnership with Samaritan's Purse, the International Relief Organization of Franklin Graham. He accepted their invitation on December 2, 2004.

Franklin Graham came earlier to Manila on July 11, 2004 to formalize a partnership agreement with the local church leaders. On this trip, he met with several more leaders including Philippines For Jesus Movement (PJFM) representative Bishop Leo Alconga, Chairman of Intercessors for the Philippines Bishop Dan Balais, Far East Broadcasting Corporation President Dan Andrew Cura, leaders from the Workplace which included businessman Dr. Andrew Liuson of the Cityland Real Estate Development Corporation, Publisher Emilio Yap of Manila Bulletin, President and General Manager of the Manila Hotel Atty. Joey Lina and PNB Chairman of the Board Flor Tarrera.

The partnership between the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association and five major umbrella groups representing the evangelical Gospel-preaching churches composed of the PCEC headed by Bishop Tendaro, the National Council of Christian Churches of the Philippines (NCCCP) headed by retired Justice of the Supreme Court Raoul Victorino, the umbrella group spearheaded by the Jesus Is Lord (JIL) of Bishop Eduardo Villanueva and a majority of Pual Gospel Churches, the Alliance of Baptist Churches (ABC) headed by Bishop Reuben Abante and the Group of Chinese Churches headed by Rev. Jeremiah Cheung, formed a local body called the Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival (MMFGF).

Following the agreement, the newly formed Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival established its office at the 33rd Floor of the Antel Global Bldg. along Julia Vargas Ave. at the Ortigas Center on January 25, 2005.

It was on January 15, 2005 when the MMFGF organized a Task Force to plan and launch a Workplace Conference and the Christian Executives Leadership Seminar on April 15-16, 2005. The inclusion of Workplace workers in the evangelistic ministry marked a paradigm shift in the approach to evangelism, and a first in the BGEA experience. It was a welcome shift in the Philippines especially where transformation of society has become the crying need of the entire nation.

Held at the Makati Shangri-La and chaired by Dr. Andrew Liuson, the Conference drew an attendance of 1,300 while the Leadership Seminar had 1,100 Christian leaders attending. The Conference-Seminar focused on the importance of living out one's faith in the workplace, what it means to be an Ambassador of Christ as a leader and influencer, the elements that define the culture of a high performance organization as well as the valuable lessons learned in ethics and integrity by our local Christian executives. The list of speakers was topped by Don Soderquist, the extraordinary American businessman behind the phenomenal growth of one of the largest companies in the world—the WAL-MART chain, the $43 billion company which grew to $200 billion under his stewardship as senior Vice-President and Chief Operating Officer.

The Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival was assisted by the BGEA Team composed of the following personnel:

Festival Director
Carlos "Bill" Kennedy
Resident Director
Roy Kruse

Ministry Manager for International Training
Robert "Bob" Tanner
Coordinator for Counseling and Follow-Up
James Robert "Bob" Kending
BGEA Liaison and Correspondence Officer
Annie Kennedy
Resident Director
Chadwick "Chad" Hammond (reassigned to Japan)
BGEA Associate
Adrian Arce (reassigned to Japan)

Recent developments in Asia, however, includes the holding of another Asian Festival on November, 2006 in Okinawa, Japan and two original Team members, Chad Hammond and Adrian Arce, were transferred to Okinawa. Chad Hammond was replaced by Roy Kruse.

The MMFGF Philippine Leadership include the following:

Chairman
Bishop Efraim Tendaro
Secretary General
Bishop Reuben Abante
Chief of Staff
Mr. James Tioco
Vice-Chairman for Ministers
Bishop Federico Magbanua
Vice-Chairman for Finance
Ms. Flor Tarrera
Vice-Chairman for Communications
Arch. Dan Andrew Cura
Treasurer
Atty. Josette Abarca
Legal Adviser
Justice Raoul Victorino

Overseeing the entire Asia operations in BGEA veteran Dr. Hendy Holley who was the Crusade Director for Dr. Billy Graham in Manila during the 1977 Crusade in partnership with JEMELIF Bishop George Castro and Rev. Nene Ramientos.

The MMFGF office is manned by staff and volunteers numbering more than one hundred. Starting work as early as January, 2005, the MMFGF personnel manned twelve committees which are integral to the preparations and accomplishment of the February 2-5, 2006 Festival. These committees are: Ministers (to coordinate the churches), Prayer, Operation Andrew (Adults), Children's Operation Andy, Youth, Women's Carriers of Hope, Men Workplace, Communications, Music (for the 5,000 voice choir), Physical Arrangement, Ushering and Security.

There are about 3,000 - 4,000 churches all over Metro Manila and the surrounding areas of the CALABARZON and GAMANAVA including some churches in the Bulacan Province. To date, more than 50% of the targeted churches have already come on board. More so, with the participation of the Philippines For Jesus Movement - JIL, the Quirino Grandstand-Rizal Park area is expected to overflow with those who will respond to answer God's call to the transforming power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The evangelization of children is one of the priorities of MMFGF. Considering the children, ages 7-14, which is very much evident in Metro Manila, a PISTANG PAMBATA or Children's Festival will be held on February 4 at 8:00am. As a result of the MMFGF's "Operation Andy" campaign (enlisting 3 names of friends and loved ones), around 100,000 children will be expected to attend.

With the Philippine Christian churches joined together in unity, the Metro Manila Franklin Graham Festival can expect the fulfillment of its objective to gather "the greatest number of Filipinos to hear the gospel and be invited to respond, to be disciplined and integrated in the local church to worship and serve the Lord" at the Rizal Park on February 2-5, 2006.

For the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, it will be Franklin's first evangelistic outreach in Asia; significantly, Metro Manila will be the very first to hear Franklin Graham's message that THERE IS HOPE in Jesus Christ.

hand-painted Irish linen tops that were perfect for Guam's cool and breezy weather.

The modern Filipiniana collection presented designs in classic piña, Irish linen and abaca, in hues of ecru, off-white and beige. The models sashayed in kumalas, panuelos and barongs that were cut and altered for modern fashionistas.

The DSO-OMO Men's line came in cool colors of aqua, turquoise, apple green and bubble-gum blue, with a touch of Filipino pride in its use of the ancient alibata and Mangyan weaves as accents.

Sandico-Ong also unveiled her latest Lukot Collection. Using her trademark banana-fiber wraps, she has added a process of crumpling the fabrics to give more texture.

Guam First Lady Joanne Camacho stepped out in a stunning red gown with a Lukot wrap in deep purple, escorted by her son Champ Camacho and daughter Maria Camacho.

The finale featured a flowing Irish linen wedding gown with a gold hand-beaded bodice and a hand-embroidered veil on a Maria Clara-like bride. The groom was in tapered black slacks and a classic piña barong.

Part of the proceeds were earmarked for Sandico-Ong's Earthline Foundation, the American Red Cross and the Guam Hope Foundation, which is committed to the health and education of indigent children.

The fashion show was directed by Raymond Villanueva and jointly produced by the Pangasinan Ladies Club of Guam and host Alfredo Antolin. Fashion stylists and executive assistants Tanya Lim Llana and Sara Morales assisted Sandico-Ong. Stage design and overall production were by Nathan De Leon, Hermin Estalbo, Dan De Los Santos and Antonio Salac Santos.

Among the professional models from the Philippines were JP Abinuman, Ava Abejar, Herib Arabelo and Rafael Kieffer. They were joined by Guam-based Sabrina Mabanta Wong.

DREAMS CAN COME TRUE Maidenform uncovers a dream that women has coveted for years

Dreams—a unique and mystical activity of the human psyche. It is a subconscious desire for the best things that this world can offer. Dreams jobs, dream houses, dream men, even a dream bra! Do dreams come true? Yes, at least, one of them does. For women who had dreamed of better support, comfort and style for their bras, Maidenform introduces the Dream Bra—the first bra tailored to fit, feel and be worn like a dream!

The Maidenform Dream Bra is the culmination of a two-year quest to design the ultimate bra in which every woman feels comfortable, confident and looks her best. And because Maidenform knows dreams come in all shapes and sizes, the Dream Bra is available in sizes 32A to 40D to ensure that each one provides the most comfortable, personalized, figure-flattering shape and lift. As the sizes go up, the construction of the bra adjusts to deliver the right coverage and support specific to the size of the wearer, while maintaining the same without-etc. For instance, larger sizes have wider straps to provide better support. The width of the band and eye is also proportional to the band size for added comfort. Its patent-secure neckline guarantees to convertible comfort straps that can be worn as conventional underwire or criss-cross style. It also has a hidden, patented slip-resistant wire for a seamless effect and feminine curvaceous shape. The clean, contemporary design provides a smooth look and is ultra soft because an elastic is exposed to the skin.

The Dream Bra, like so many of the perfect things women dream about, combines all the things they want—but didn't know they could have. It anticipates women's needs in key areas such as comfort, fit and everyday wearability that gives women a flawless look under their clothes.

Studies have revealed that many women are uncomfortable in their bras and are looking for good support and lift. They also want a bra that makes them feel secure and with ample fabric so that they are properly covered even when wearing thin tops. A bra's durability is also highly important to women because they want it to last through many washings.

Maidenform's design team took a holistic approach to re-thinking every aspect of a bra, paying particular attention to those concerns that paved the way for the creation of the Dream Bra. It is the newest addition to the company's rich history of bra innovations that has spanned nearly 100 years.

The Dream Bra is available in body beige, black, white, pink, navy and dream blue in all leading department stores nationwide. Maidenform is exclusively distributed by Rustan Marketing Corporation.

Maternity fashion lays golden Egg

By Cheche V. Moral

WHEN CHARLOTTE Devereux, 35, got pregnant with her first child in 2001, she found herself in the same predicament as perhaps every fashionable, new mom-to-be: She had nothing nice to wear!

Devereux said her pre-pregnancy clothes had gotten too tight for her growing belly, yet she was still too small for typical maternity clothing. However, the choices available in her native New Zealand left much to be desired.

Devereux was distraught. There is no worse way to make a pregnant woman feel un-sexy, after all, than by concealing her swollen midsection under frumpy clothing.

Like a kangaroo

"I tried on this pair of pants with a pouch on the belly, and I looked like a kangaroo!" she recalled with a laugh.

"We got some giggles from that one," joined in her mom, Colyn Devereux-Kay.

Not long after, the creative daughter and her enterprising mom would hatch, well, Egg (for Essentials for Growing Girls), a clothing line that covers all stages of a woman's pregnancy.

Devereux, who attended both art and finance schools, designs for Egg; her mom, a businesswoman, runs it. Devereux later enjoyed wearing her stylish designs while heavy with her now 18-month-old second child.

"When you're pregnant you want comfort but you want to still look really good," noted Devereux-Kay. She and her daughter met with the local press recently to prepare for the launch of Egg's two boutiques. One is at Gloria 4, in Makati, and the other, at the Mall of Asia in Pasay, which opens in March.

Devereux-Kay says her generation was lucky that, when she got pregnant with her son and daughter, trapeze-style dresses popularized by the model Twiggy were in vogue. "I never had the same problem as Charlotte's," she beamed.

Their own models

Even then, the slim grandma proudly wears Egg's clothing today, including a black empire-cut blouse with mesh cap sleeves for this interview. She swears by the clothes' comfort, especially for long-haul flights. And there's no guessing she's in maternity wear.

Her daughter, who isn't pregnant, was also wearing a black empire dress with flippy hemline.

The woman who brought Egg to Manila was also in a black top and tan jacket from Egg's S/S 2006 collection. A mother of one, Rachel Joaquin-Madrid said she and husband Martin plan to have more kids "and I want to make sure I'm dressed well." She added that she always got queries about her clothes when she was pregnant, and she would always say she got them abroad.

The Madrids' company, Tradewind Imports and Distribution Inc., owns Egg's Philippine franchise. "We chose to bring in Egg because it has an all-range collection, from everyday wear to corporate and dressier occasions," the young mom explains.

High birth rate

The Devereuxs put up their first store in Auckland only three years ago, and now have 17 boutiques across New Zealand and Australia. It was named seventh fastest growing company in New Zealand last year.

In spite of offers to set up shop in different countries, they decided to take on the Philippines first because of the high birth rate here (about two million in 2004, according to Martin Madrid).

Owing to its mid-high price point (tees will sell from P2,000-up; jeans P5,000-up; dresses P7,000-up), Egg's target market is only the Top 5 percent—still over three times higher than their entire New Zealand market, which has a 30,000 annual birth rate.

Shapely Orientalia

JAPANESE-INSPIRED FLORAL prints and wraparounds highlight the Orientalia Collection of For Me, the brand specially designed to suit the four body shapes of women.

Your figure may be an hourglass, or a triangle with shapely hips, a straight-looking rectangle like that of Naomi or Kate Moss, or an inverted triangle. Whatever your shape is, you can definitely look sexy with the right fit and style details.

Orientalia is expressed in kimono-inspired wraps mixed with fashionable boleros and shrugs. Dainty floral prints and delicate embroidery provide a feminine touch to the collection.

An off-white quarter-sleeve shrug with a deep-V tie peckline helps make a heavy upper body look narrow. The embroidery at the back that cascades from the hem makes it more interesting. The basil green shrug with a shirred chest area helps achieve a busty look, while a tie-around hem that wraps your torso provides a slimming effect on the waist.

A carnation pink top with fold down open-knit collar breaks the width of a heavy bosom to balance the look of an inverted triangle figure. It has a removable belt that accentuates the waistline. This would look great paired with a printed A-line dainty floral skirt made with microfiber twill or a nice-fitting Tasha jeans.

A sexy printed brown tube top flows elegantly on the hourglass figure, with the asymmetric hemline giving the illusion of wide hips. A casual boat-neck top with diagonal print on the body broadens the shoulder of the rectangle figure to give a more sexy silhouette.

For Me stores are in SM North Edsa, SM Megamall, Robinsons Galleria, The Shops Greenhills, Alimall, SM San Lazaro, Market Market, Festival Mall, SM Southmall, SM Sucat, SM Dasmariñas, SM Bacoor, SM Lucena, SM Pampanga, CSI Lucena and Ayala Cebu.

the Filipino sensibility well. "I've been here a few times for other business. You have fantastic malls, you love to shop, and Filipino women are very stylish," she noted.

Egg has scaled down its sizing to include XX-small for the petite Filipina (the biggest size is XX-large). Its catalog says the range is "designed to take you from the first to the ninth month of birth and afterward." One skirt-dress style, in fact, can be worn five ways, three of which as a sexy dress even long after losing the baby weight.

Two collections

Egg comes out with two collections each year. Its mainstays consist of basics (Essentials) that can be mixed or matched. These include underwear, tank tops, short- and long-sleeved tees and tops, pants, skirts, jeans, suit jacket, swimsuit—all in solid neutrals.

While her collections include several printed materials, Devereux prefers solid colors, mixing fabrics instead to add texture to her designs. "Prints make pregnant women look bigger," she explains.

Apart from work wear, Egg also has the Designer range, which consists of dressy day-to-evening pieces.

In line with its expansion in the tropics, the label also launched a line called Egg for All Seasons. It makes use of "transitional fabrics," mostly cottons with Spandex or Lycra, flexible garments suited for summer to winter, or, in the Philippines' case, air-conditioned indoors. (Egg uses New Zealand's famed merino wool for winterwear, but Devereux-Kay concedes it may be too much for the tropical climate.) The waistbands of pants and skirts either have thick elastic bands or side zips with adjustable D-rings.

With Egg, future moms have something to look forward to besides the baby.

BLUE empire V-front dress

FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM NOW comes high-end fashion brand Wallis, which opened its first Asian boutique at the Shangri-La Plaza Mall recently.

Wallis is a much sought-after name for its elegant, grown-up, individual styles for urban women. Its lines are perfect for career-driven fashion-forward Filipinas 25-49 years of age.

The casual wear selection includes picks in neutral browns and khakis brightened by shades of lime, coral and indigo. There are safari-style or military-inspired jackets, belt-tie waists, cropped trousers and tailored waistcoats in vibrant colors and nature-inspired prints and embellishments.

A vintage-inspired collection is exemplified by godet and raw-edged skirts and ruffle or knitwear trim blouses in soft colors like shell and rose pink, mint, latte or cream, accented with sea green, mauve and subtle metallics.

Accessories include metallic beaded purse, leather sash belts and embellished evening bags.

Wallis is the biggest women's fashion brand currently under the Arcadia Group Plc, the largest clothing retailer in UK and owners of Topshop, Topman and Dorothy Perkins. It has 136 stores and 150 concessions in UK alone, and has 103 stores all over the world.

In the Philippines, Robinsons Specialty Stores Inc. (RSSI) holds the exclusive franchise to Wallis.

Wallis is at 3/F Indulgences Wing of the Shangri-La Plaza Mall. Visit www.wallis-fashion.co.uk DAVINES Mask Hair Color System brings out Angel Jacob's pretty mestiza features.

Angel's mane secret

"YOUR HAIR IS THE FIRST thing that people see," says Angel Jacob. "Even if you don't wear any makeup, healthy and lustrous hair will make you stand out."

Famed hair and beauty expert Henri Calayag of H salon agrees "Customizing a look to a woman's lifestyle is key. Bringing out her inner beauty is the task of a stylist, and it will show if she's confident and comfortable in the style she sports."

For Angel, days are packed with various hosting engagements and fashion editorials, not to mention spending quality time with her 12-year-old daughter.

Angel maintains a fuss-free look to suit her busy lifestyle. To bring out her pretty mestiza features, Calayag reveals Angel's secret to beautiful tresses: Angel religiously colors her hair every four to six months. The Davines Mask Hair Color System is heaven-sent for her.

"It's made with all-natural ingredients, giving my hair a shine and color boost. It's gentle on my scalp—and it smells good, too!"

Calayag has been using Davines for many years now and for friends like Angel Jacob, he uses nothing else but Davines.

"Get moisturizing treatments regularly. And for daily care, use cleansing and conditioning agents that are recommended for colored hair," he says.

BEAUTY

Getting gorgeous

Knowing what look works best for you means buying the makeup that will be of best use to you

WHEN I'M IN THE MALL checking out new products, I have a grand time educating myself. Things turn serious the minute I decide I must have a particular beauty item.

Of course, in order to really get to know the product and find out if it's worth writing about, a road test of sorts is required.

From a consumer's point of view, I suggest you pick what you think will be of most use. For it to be worth the amount of money you're going to shell out, you should be able to use it at least once a week. Also the more versatile the better. A multipurpose product you can use for day or night is ideal.

It's also important to remember that makeup has a shelf life. It is not an investment, in the strictest sense of the word, although it may get you places, a new job or, with God's good graces, a new hot boyfriend. So, pick your beauty arsenal well.

Some are worth the price, like Lancôme's juicy tube, but others are really just an extravagance. If you have the cash, good for you. Unfortunately, not everybody is as blessed so choose wisely.

Another way to determine which products you need is by working with the look that works best for you. The amount of compliments you get when sporting a particular look is probably a good gauge. And if you have an asset that you want people to focus on, that's what you should play up. If you have great skin, for instance, the sheer, luminous look would be great on you. Meanwhile, girls with great lips a la Angelina Jolie should have a good selection of lipsticks, including the smashing, diva-ish red-hot number.

Check out Avon for lip shades that give you real value for your hard-earned bucks. They have an array of fun colors that spread well.

When you are aware of which feature you should play up, then focus on the makeup product you need to do just that. Shopping gets easier, and you bring home products that will be of better use to you.

Let's learn from the beauty experts themselves. Professional makeup artists always just play up one feature, so determine yours and create the right balance and blending—these are the real secrets to great makeup.

KNOCKOUT!

Ria Francisco-Prieto

ENHANCE beautiful skin with liquid foundation. It will add glow and luminosity, and is best for dry skin since it hides flaky skin best. The perfect shade should vanish in your skin without a trace. Test on skin before purchasing. Try Maybelline Clear Smooth Aqua Gel Foundation.

GOLD powder can be used all over the face if dusted lightly and on your eyes as an eye shadow. It is the easiest and fastest way to make your tanned skin glow. To show off your tan, dust all over your body, specifically on your shoulder blades and legs. Try Fashion 21.

GRAB attention with an amazing pout by using of the longest color in the spectrum—red. It takes approximately five seconds to apply the color, but it is the most attractive yet hardest look to sport. Low in maintenance, yet high in fashion value. Great red lips should be celebrated. Try Awake, available at Rustan's.

FOR A CASUAL, polished look, all you need is a nude sheer lipplie that glides easily on your lips. This tube has a three-in-one purpose: It moisturizes, adds color and provides gloss. A real space- and money-saver Shu Uemura tinted lip gloss

IF YOU look good in earthy tones, pick an eyeshadow shade that will complement the color of your blush. It's easy to use, and the shade can be used from day to night by just adding application. Lancôme eyeshadow

FOR THE MOST striking eyes, use liquid eyeliner with a fine point to get the best precision. Make sure it is water-proof so you don't have to worry about smudging. Awake liquid eyeliner stays on for hours.

GET a glow with illuminating powder that's good to use under your eyebrows, under eye and lightly all over your face. It will add a subtle shimmer to your skin and make it look healthy. Shu Uemura glow-on blush

A SWIPE of a dark shade on the crease of your eyes will give the illusion of deep-set eyes. Use an eyeshadow brush and wet powder eyeshadow for more control. Balance this look by using nude lipstick. Avon eyeshadow

TO DRAW attention to your eyes, go for the smoky look, which is eye-catching and sexy. Make sure to use pencil for a cleaner, sharper finish. Smudge the lines with a cotton swab or tip applicator. Clinique eye pencil

ADD color to your pale skin with the use of a terra cotta powder blush. Most of the time, blush is all you need to brighten up your face. Smile and blush onto the apple of your cheeks. Movie Blush, available at Essences

YOU don't have to keep biting your lips to make it look bitten. Opt for a berry lip shade. Make sure your lips are well-moisturized because lipplie accentuate dryness of lips, and that can be unattractive. Fasio super glossy lipstick, available at Essences

Beautiful inside and out

GUERLAIN Orchidee Imperiale

BEAUTIFUL PACKAGING TAKES MY breath away. It's true that it is what's inside that should count, but a tube or jar that can pass for jewelry on your dresser or in your purse obviously makes for a more attractive choice.

With Guerlain (Geh-lan), I found products that worked wonders while also looking great in their jewel-like packaging. I hope the results of my road test will help you decide what Guerlain item you need. They are quite expensive, so think things over carefully.

Orchidee Imperiale cream for night and day (P19,998). The jar comes in rich colors of indigo, gold and sapphire blue, and looks like something out of an Egyptian royal vault. A beauty that will grace any dressing table or bathroom counter.

Guerlain's research team discovered that an orchid's secret to looking eternally preserved is in its roots. The team was then able to extract its essence and incorporate it into this cream.

What the product does is reverse, or at the very least delay, the aging process by strengthening the immune system of the skin. A failed immune system results in wrinkles, fine lines, age spots, large pores, dryness and inflammation in the form of skin redness or breakouts.

For my road test, I used my regular cleanser and toner, then went straight to the Guerlain cream day and night. No need for a separate moisturizer or even an eye cream, as the cream covers all.

With Guerlain, I found products that worked wonders and looked great in their jewel-like packaging

ISSIMA Midnight Secret

The results? Better definition on my jaw line and cheekbones, and the cheeks under my eye area seemed plumper. Sagging was definitely minimized along with brown spots from old pimple marks and sun damage. I have an oily T-zone, but the cream seemed to have balanced it out, as there were no breakouts.

My pores look smaller now, my cheeks are dewy and the eye area is smooth and supple. My neck area and back of the hands, which are the first indicators of age, can compete with any teenager's, no kidding.

Instant D'Un Ete EDT 80 ml (P4,850). A creamy vanilla-type scent that can be worn night and day due to its magnolia and citrus scents. The actual notes are amber, citrus honey, magnolia flower and tonka bean.

My advice is to wear this scent sparingly when you are alone with the guy you really have the hots for. It's that sensual. Do test the fragrance on your arm and walk around for about 10 minutes before you decide to purchase. It helps to have an objective companion around to tell you if it works on you or not.

Issima Midnight Secret 30 ml (P5,750). This is my favorite product in Guerlain's skin care line, as there is nothing like it. If you are planning a romantic getaway or if that guy you are eyeing will see you early in the morning after a night of extreme partying and sleep deprivation, this is your secret weapon.

Just wash your face the night (or early morning) before hitting the sack, and apply three drops on the face. All you need is three hours' sleep and you will wake up looking fresh and blooming. Guaranteed.

KissKiss Maxi Shine lipstick (P1,550). If you are the type who suffers from consistently chapped lips but hates the greasy texture and shiny finish of gloss, who wishes for fuller lips or a sheer finish and wants the overall lip texture to improve long-term, then this lipstick is for you.

I couldn't resist the shade 666 Pink Shine for its dangerously sexy appeal. There are 15 shades, and they come in a dazzling white-gold metal case, all smelling like strawberry jam. My other favorite shades are Purple Shine, Red Shine, Mauve Shine and Chocolate Shine.

Guerlain makeup services are available at Philosophy salon by Mikaela (call 8153697). Guerlain products are exclusively available at Rustan's Makati and Tower.

Everlasting youth

THERE IS NO SUCH thing as age reversal. It's either you fight it or embrace it. You can exercise, eat right, apply all the expensive creams or, if you are really desperate, go under the knife.

But whatever you do, whatever you put on yourself, you will age anyway. Your skin gets drier, the tone duller and the lines more prominent.

Our model is 59 years old and has been using the same cream, make-up and look for the last 20 years. She's decided that now is the right time for a physical makeover before she hits the big 60 next year.

Her most noticeable problems are the dryness of her skin and the lines on her forehead.

Face—Our model has been using cake foundation for the longest time. I asked her to switch to liquid foundation. It is better to look for a silicone-based, light-reflective foundation.

A good product to try is Youngblood Liquid Foundation. It is very sheer and has built-in moisturizer so dry skin will not flake and lines will be less noticeable.

Eyebrows—Her eyebrows have been over-tweezed and over-arched. It gave the impression of her as someone stiff and old.

I decided to thicken her eyebrows by filling in the sparse area with a brunette pencil. To avoid artificial-looking brows, I blended it with a tiny firm brush using Mac Eyebrow Pencil in Brunette.

Eyes—Her eyes are somewhat droopy due to the loose skin. It is also wrinkled and discolored. Before I applied eyeshadow, I prepped the skin around the eye area with eye cream. Do not apply too much, as this will cause the eyeshadow to slide. I used a deep coppery brown eyeshadow on the eyelid and a golden apricot shadow on the crease.

Eyeliner and mascara are very important. I used a gray-black eyeliner to counteract the drooping eyelids and brushed two coats of mascara also in black. I used Maybelline Auto liner in Black and Maybelline Great Lash Mascara in Black.

Blush—I used Smashbox Spotlight for cheeks to give her that young, youthful glow. It is also light-reflective, that's why it gives the illusion of a poreless and wrinkle-free skin.

Lips—I used a cream-base lipstick (Revlon Moisture Lipstick) and topped it off with lip gloss for that dewy effect. Avoid using lip liner, as this will only emphasize the lines around the lip area.

Hair—We gave our model full bangs and colored her hair dark brown to cover the grayish roots. The color also warmed up her skin tone and made it appear healthier and glowing. The bangs covered the lines on her forehead and gave her that dignified yet youthful look.

I believe the secret to everlasting youth is all in our mind. We should learn to relax and let go. What appears on the outside is a reflection of what we really feel on the inside.

Chill, relax and you will see your skin and face reward you.

The Fabulous Women of Philip Stein TESLAR

Philip Stein TESLAR, the ingenious watch brand offers wearer outstanding levels of health and wellness with its marvelous TESLAR technology, has created a loyal following among the best of Hollywood's female stars with its astounding combination of elegant form and unrivaled function.

Madonna, the modern musical genius, was among the firsts who have enjoyed the difference of Philip Stein TESLAR watches. She fell in love with Philip Stein TESLAR so much that she requested kid-size watches for her two children and gave away watches to her friends as gifts. One of them was the queen of talk, TV mogul and noted philanthropist Oprah Winfrey, who loved her white Philip Stein TESLAR watch so much, she added it to her televised Christmas list, the "Oprah Favorite Things," in 2005.

Soon the news of the wellness techno-watch reached the ears of Beyonce Knowles, the saucy singer of the trio Destiny's Child. She is known for having excellent taste in everything. Philip Stein TESLAR watch being a masterpiece in itself, its elegant design and brilliant technology won the pop idol's heart. Canadian punk rocker Avril Lavigne too heard of the novel Philip Stein TESLAR and got herself one and she has been rocking ever since with her Philip Stein TESLAR.

Philip Stein TESLAR has established itself as the best fashion and wellness accessory. To this gorgeous actress Julia Roberts and acclaimed performer Natalie Portman can testify, being proud owners of Philip Stein TESLAR watches themselves.

Nammi Campbell, an icon in international modeling who graced many designer shows such as Ralph Lauren, Versace, Dolce and Gabbana and covers of fashion magazines like Vogue, couldn't agree more. She has been spotted with her Philip Stein TESLAR on, along with fellow Brazilian international fashion model Gisele Bündchen.

Philip Stein TESLAR is a collection of tastefully designed timepieces with dual-time zones for the multitasking achiever. Women can choose from two watch cases: the small case and the large case watches, both with optional double diamond or diamond embellishment and with a wide array of interchangeable straps and not colors to choose from.

There are colorful satin-strapped large case timepieces embellished with diamonds for the glitzy gala, classic leather-strapped small case watches for the talk show episode, colorful rubber-strapped pieces for the more casual album launch. From the runway to the Rodeo Drive, there is a Philip Stein TESLAR watch to suit every occasion and mood.

Aside from its fabulous look, Philip Stein TESLAR watches is a hit among stars for the technological marvel: TESLAR chip placed inside every timepiece, the revolutionary technology designed to reinforce and protect the body's own electromagnetic field against electromagnetic currents emitted by cellular phones, computers and other electronic devices, which were proven to pose hazards to our health.

The TESLAR chip, when worn at the left wrist, brings about the noticeable, miraculous healing effect that only Philip Stein TESLAR watches offer. From a subtle pulsing, tingling sensation, calmness in normally stressful situations and deep, restful sleep, to improved concentration, increased energy and productivity, and a remarkable overall improvement in wellbeing, Philip Stein TESLAR wearers across the globe have noticed the pleasant change and taken pleasure in living optimal levels of health and wellbeing.

Philip Stein TESLAR also offers regal chronograph watches and bracelets pour homme.

The Philip Stein TESLAR watch collection is exclusively available at Lucerne boutiques in Level 2 Shangri-La Plaza Mall and Level 1, Glorietta 4, Ayala Center, and Chronos boutique in Ground Level, V-Mall, Greenhills Shopping Center. For more information, please visit www.philipstein.com

a close watch on electronic pollution and the only watch that can make you feel better

Electronic Pollution

We live in a world of high technology and sophisticated living. Our modern lifestyles encourage us to move and work faster in an attempt to accomplish more in less time than ever before. As a result of this stressful lifestyle and the pervasive electronic technology that powers it, our life expectancy increases while our life-long health declines.

With our increased usage and exposure to electronic gadgets, such as computers, mobile phones, and televisions, all emitting health-threatening Extremely Low Frequencies (ELF), our environment becomes increasingly polluted by the electronic frequencies.

In Honor of Nikola Tesla: A Pioneer of Energy Science

The TESLAR® technology was named after Nikola Tesla, who worked with Thomas Edison. Tesla, a brilliant inventor, is the man who gave us alternating current. He is considered the father of modern electrical technology. The technology used in the TESLAR® chip.

Philip Stein® TESLAR®

In the Philip Stein® TESLAR® watch are two specially designed TESLAR® chips. The TESLAR® chips emit a signal of relaxation and calm, which helps reinforce and protect the body's own electromagnetic field against unwelcome interactions with external electronic pollution, allowing the body to maintain more normal balance.

What to Expect

Because every Philip Stein® TESLAR® wearer may have differing levels of sensitivity to electromagnetic fields, each wearer may experience different reactions. In the last 20 years, studies have shown that the TESLAR® watch helps to improve migraine, arthritis, depression, insomnia and jet lags.

As a result of the TESLAR® effect, wearers have experienced:

- Deeper, more restful nighttime sleep
- More calm and less tension in normally stressful situations
- Improved concentration and ability to focus at work
- Increased levels of energy
- An overall improvement in well-being

Health Watch

The Philip Stein® TESLAR® wearers include such notable celebrities as Oprah Winfrey, Madonna, Jack Nicholson, Barbara Walters, Avril Lavigne, etc. The watch is popular amongst sportsmen, as it is proven that it also helps to ease aches, pain and frigidity. Professional athletes and a number of US Athletes training for the Summer 2004 Olympics, including Kenta Bell, Ty Scwin, and Penny Blackwell. They have claimed that their endurance and overall performance also see significant improvement.

Experience the TESLAR® effect and let yourself feel more relaxed, more rested and less tense. Try it. Wear it. Live it. Feel it.

Confessions of a prom queen wannabe

IF I HAD THE POWER to change one defining sartorial moment in my life, it would be prom night and the overdone meringue of a dress I wore Okay, okay, so it was the '80s and we were allowed to be over the top in a "Dynasty" sort of way (hmm, I wonder if younger readers can relate?) But that doesn't make me feel any better.

I can't help but cringe when I see old photos of a not very fashion-savvy moi in my white and peach confection—complete with dyed-to-match peach, er, salmon pumps and wrist corsage!

I was no prom queen, but in the tradition of "Zapped," a cheesy prom movie from, you guessed it, the '80s, I would have really enjoyed wearing that dainty little tiara

So, readers out there who are about to attend their proms or graduation balls, do take heed. Whatever you choose to wear now can haunt you the rest of your fashionable lives What's a girl to do, right? Well, start off by discussing options with your parents.

Whether you like it or not, they are paying for your dress so you must take budget into consideration.

Once you've done that, you can actually start choosing a design that suits your personality and body type. Remember, it's important to be ultra-comfortable in whatever it is you opt to wear. That's one way to ensure that you enjoy your prom experience.

If you are on a strict budget, check out the different retail or department stores for pretty prom frocks. The only problem with this is you run the risk of bumping into someone wearing the same dress.

Another option would be to go to a "costu-mera" to have a particular design copied.

Of course, if the budget permits, it's a total treat to go to a designer of your choice to have something really special made. The designer can even help you choose accessories to complete your look and make you stand out even more.

There are countless prom dresses to choose from nowadays, so there really is no excuse to look less than your prom queen best. Ten or 20 years from now, you should be able to look at your photos with a smile—of pleasure, not sarcastic humor.

Now, if only I could go back in time, I would definitely grab any of these fabulous frocks and change the course of history. Mine, any way!

Picture-perfect princess frocks

By Bianca Consunji

MANY HIGH-SCHOOL girls, the moment they step into the campus as freshmen, look forward to their prom; others, however, don't like the fuss and frippery of it all. Still, most girls do go for the experience. after all, isn't the prom the center of nearly all high school-themed movies?

However, high-school movies never show how hard it is to find the dress of the night. More often than not, they just waltz into the ballroom, resplendent in glittering gowns and pretty corsets (with the good-looking date, of course).

But the search for the perfect prom gown is often more grief than glamour, especially since nowadays, no one wants to look generic.

Stuck for ideas? Here's a tip: Ditch the standard spaghetti-strapped dress with a poncho/shawl and look for something that's really you.

You could be a glamorous drama queen, or the sweet girl next door, or the rebellious edgy rocker chick. But always keep in mind that comfort is key. Don't be overly trendy (if you don't want to cringe at your photos 10 years from now). And remember that accessories are vital in personalizing your dress.

Beau of the ball

By Alex Y. Vergara

DRESSING UP ON PROM night has always been serious business for girls. Most boys are simply content to borrow ill-fitting suits that belonged either to Dad or Big Brother. As far as old movies go, what usually concerned boys was the post-party scenario.

Perish the thought. Of course, boys will always be boys. Giving the girls' chaperons the slip even before the last dance ends and spending precious moments alone with their objects of affection will always be on top of their agenda. These days, however, they also want to go through such a rite of passage in style.

"As recent as last year, almost all my clients were girls," says fashion designer Joey Samson. "This time, however, I'm attending to an equal number of boys."

And most of them won't settle for the usual suit. Some even came to Samson's shop armed with the latest issue of a glossy men's magazine featuring one of his works. Most of them wanted him to do a similar grey wool number with an exaggerated collar.

That's probably one reason fashion-forward boys are now going to designers. Unlike most youngsters their age, they don't subscribe anymore to the herd mentality. Looking even remotely like the next guy, especially if he's a rival to a fair maiden's heart, is a big no-no.

"After years of wearing jeans," says fashion designer Nono Palmos, "young men are starting to realize that there's glamour and power in wearing a well-made suit or a luxurious pair of Oxfords."

Going for a sleek and streamlined wardrobe, he says, is a mere extension of men's (and boys') current fascination with equally stylish and expensive "toys for the big boys" such as plasma TVs, luxury watches and roadsters.

And based on fashion designer Randy Ortiz's experience, most boys nowadays have a clear idea of what they want.

"It's still the parents, of course, who foot the bill," he says. "Most of the time, however, it's their sons who ultimately call the shots as to what to wear. Just like girls, boys also like to catch attention, albeit in more subtle ways."

That doesn't rule out, however, the possibility of snagging the right prom outfit in a department store or shop featuring mass-produced labels. Half the number of suits featured in this photo shoot, for instance, were sourced from the likes of Anthony Nocum for SM, Rico Salandanan for The Landmark, Zara and Van Heusen.

Nocum and his colleagues put premium on fit. "Apart from buying a nice formal white dress shirt, those who aren't used to wearing suits should stick to classic cuts in solid colors such as black and navy blue," says Nocum.

Indeed, it always pays to dress up impeccably on prom night even if your mind is wandering off elsewhere. A boy may not always get the girl to say yes, but years from now, he can at least take comfort in the fact that he looked and felt his best while trying.

INTOPROM

IT TAKES MORE THAN THE RIGHT SUIT TO make or break an entire look. Apart from the all-important fit, designers Anthony Nocum, Joey Samson, Nono Palmos and Randy Ortiz offer a number of practical tips to this year's batch of prom boys.

- A good pair of well-shaped black leather shoes is a safe bet. Leather shoes (no matter what color) with thick rubber soles a la Doc Martens have no place in the ballroom.
- Mickey Mouse belongs to Disneyland. Wide, poly-silk neckties featuring cartoon characters as well as the striped, office variety are no-nos. Plain, slim ties are currently the rage.
- What color of suit to wear? When in doubt, stick to tried-and-tested colors and looks. Guys who have had more practice before the big night can wade into uncharted fashion territory (think Samson's periwinkle suit), especially if they feel they can pull it off.
- Regardless of the design, the suit should be snug yet comfortable to enable the wearer to make smart moves on the dance floor.
- The suit's material is nearly as important as its fit. Don't scrimp on the fabric because that's the foundation of any well-made suit. It largely determines the weight, body and volume of any outfit.
- Get a haircut a week or so before the event and not on the very day itself.
- It's important to look clean-cut, dapper and young. Apart from being fraught with risks, borrowing a suit from Dad or Big Brother ruins the entire experience of teaching a boy to dress up like a fine, young man.

Organically Papaya

What you don't know won't hurt you. But caring to identify the benefits you get from what you painstakingly rub off that sensitive skin of yours shall help. Most commercially milled soaps available on market shelves don't show their chemical content that may bring harmful effects to your skin. But Bench Organics brings to the market hand-made soaps that do not contain any chemical preservatives or hardeners that can cause skin irritation.

Be as beautiful as you want to be with Papaya Whitening and Firming Soap with Seaweed Extract. Made of the finest papaya and bearberry extracts, it peels off unwanted skin cells while its natural seaweed components cleanse and help tighten the skin leaving it younger-looking and free from all blemishes.

Papaya Whitening and Moisturizing Soap with Milk is best for you to maintain that delicate, pore and clean canvass with papaya and bearberry extracts that gently exfoliate and whiten skin. It is especially formulated with milk and shea butter to make skin silky soft to touch.

Discover your true beauty with Bench Organics Papaya Soap. It naturally whitens and brings out the lasting glow in you. Beauty is skin-deep with Bench Organics Papaya Soap. Get it at your nearest Bench and Herbench outlets nationwide.

KEY-HOLDER in croco leather and calfskin (St. Tropez), P12,500

By Cheche V. Moral

TOD'S HAS TAKEN VERY audacious moves this season.

The Italian luxury goods firm is introducing its first apparel collection this spring; it's designed by Derek Lam. And while Tod's aficionados in the Philippines won't be seeing Lam's limited-edition collection in Tod's Greenbelt 4 boutique, they will be happy to find limited-edition bags and footwear, including the famed Gommino mocs, sporting prints by popular illustrator and New Yorker fashion editor Michael Roberts.

Collaboration with artists has been a strong trend with luxury brands of late, and even the very traditional Tod's, which made its renown with the Gommino driving moccasins, is no exception.

Tod's, however, isn't veering too far from tradition. In fact, it looks to its roots even with Roberts' print: The artist fashions the signature mocs into what looks like, well, a speed- or rowboat and a race car. Cheeky. Previewed before the Asian press in November at the Hong Kong headquarters with the rest of Tod's S/S 2006 collection, the print appears in a couple of ladies' bags, a ladies' mocs, and even in a Degas shoe, Tod's popular ballerina flat. The illustrations are in black on a white background for the leather pieces; the tan canvas-and-leather bags with rope details sport white and pale-blue prints.

Tod's S/S 2006 collection will be available in late March. Stores Specialists Inc. exclusively distributes it in the Philippines.

Unlike in the previous spring, when Tod's made use of every imaginable color, the new pieces are predominantly in green, yellow, white, gold and brandy. It employs its trademark butter-soft leathers in both bags and footwear, some mixed with canvas.

Tod's bags are as pretty as they can get, though perhaps not as easily recognizable as pieces from other much-publicized labels. Tod's strength is in reworking and updating the classics—no bold displays of logos, though the label has notably used the rubber pebbles to accent bag designs. But this doesn't seem to hurt the Tod's image.

Hollywood patrons

Tod's is patronized by Hollywood's A-list—Gwyneth Paltrow and Jennifer Lopez, among countless others, have all been photographed toting their Tod's. This owes, perhaps, to the brand's emphasis on function as much as looks. Even paparazzi-hounded celebs, after all, need pieces that don't only look good but serve their purpose.

The new Benji bag sports multiple pockets, and it's predicted to be a hit. It has a retro boxy shape, with two front flaps with metal closures, and contrast stitchings. A sling pochette Benji, with a sequined version for the evening, is expected to delight younger customers.

There's the shopper Decoupage, with curvy, saddle lines that blend fabric and calfskin; metallic calfskin; snakeskin; or embellished with paillettes. Tod's also comes out with an oversized, boxy version of its popular zippered bag Miky, its answer to one of spring's hot trends.

The Gommino appears this time in ostrich or patent leather with contrast stitching. Apart from the Degas with gathered elastic sides (a dressier look is sequined), the label remakes its flats into peep-toes or cut-away sides, some in metallic skin. They're all accented with rubber pebbles, including the sexy peep-toe, nylon-and-calfskin styles with three-inch stacked heels. The wedge-heeled sandals come in either patent leather, or canvas with leather.

An alternative to the ultra-comfy Gommino is a sporty jelly-rubber-soled style with crisscross elastic sides.

The men's collection is very regatta-ready, the mocs sporting elastics and striped bands, rustproof eyelets, in suede and nylon. The lace-up versions come in suede or calfskin; another look comes in a three-tone combo. There are both tasseled and buckled city loafers, and leather flip-flops.

Razzle-dazzle in the season's best prom accessories

AWAY FROM THE REVERBERATING sound of house music and the glow stick-loving lot is a world where the party set trades their sticks for stilettos, sardos for suits, and their rave garb for ballroom gowns.

From DJs promulgating good vibes and hypnotic laser lights to teachers watching good table manners and girls checking out one another's frock—there goes the club cult entering the bourgeois ballroom scene we all know as the prom.

"Prom," short for "promenade," is derived from the Latin "prominare," which means "to drive forward." To "promenade" in the original sense was to go for a walk. In English, it came to mean to display one's self or one's finery.

And that's what happens at the prom, as 16- and 17-year-old students parade (some for the very first time) in their formal attire either in a grand ballroom, an auditorium or the school outdoor basketball court. Yes, one of my friends had her school prom at a school basketball court in broad daylight. Images of smudged mascara, sweaty suits and dwindling glam points come to mind. The horror!

Prom traditions add up to quite a list: getting a prom date, girls having their makeup done as a group, guys fitting suits, ballroom dancing, the prom king and queen, after-party hopping, first kiss, first love and other "firsts," primping and glamping up.

How about choosing the perfect gown or cocktail dress, as well as the right accessories, shoes, bags and other sparkly treats? Take note, if someone shows up in the same gown as yours, accessories will be your salvation.

Then again, sipping bubbly sometimes is enough to blur anyone's vision, making your gown look hotter!
